"MOMMY, CAN I grow up to be President of the United States?" asks little Taco. "Only if you're a Democrat," Mom Violet answers. Remember to vote on Tuesday, Nov. 4. Several statewide posts and significant propositions are on the ballot this year. Carmel does not have any candidates or measures on the ballot this time around (elections, as you may recall, were held in April). Polling places in your area can be found by calling the Monterey County Registrar of Voters. (Holly McFarland photo was taken on a ranch in Carmel Valley.)

Carmel's 70th Thoughts of an outsider

Dear Editor:

Happily, it has been harmony among friends and foes, "insiders" living within the present city boundaries, and "outsiders" residing beyond the limits of seven-eighths square mile of Carmel proper at the city's 70th birthday parties. It was obvious that Carmel is not anymore a village — except in wishful thinking, in its present size and in its past history of 70 years.

The birthday festivities were humble and modest. Seventy is the age of a patriarch. In our case a matriarch. But Carmel-by-the-Sea does not show it. The village or, more realistically said, the city did not age. I digged out of my archives Kewin Bowman's Kids Chronicle who as a teenager wrote in 1981 relating to the history of our area: "Everyone loves the great, elusive, ever sought-after quality, artistic charm as Willis Polk called it writing about Carmel. The king of charm in quaint English homes, adobe walls. No one can tell how it is accomplished, but you can show an example such as Carmel. It is the product of personal expression through one of the arts. A place like no other could be devoid of this "artistic charm." Carmel is full of it..." The then-kid Kewin said it all.

Carmel is at the age of 70 flourishing and feeling young. And at the same time Carmel shows maturity, strength. During these 70 years mayors and citypersons came and went. We need another 50 years or so to establish objectively what they accomplished and where they failed. The balance for the first 70 years of existing shows without any doubt a state of stability but also a comparative relation between failures and magnitudes.

The outsiders, from Carmel River to Highway 1 to the Pacific Ocean, to the Olymp of Carmel Woods, the entire unincorporated area around Carmel-by-the-Sea had some nostalgic feelings. Three former mayors with its corresponding councils expressed the desire to establish natural boundaries of Carmel. But it did not happen, although a communal and cultural and economical interest were in existence. Carmel has outgrown its seven-eighths square mile, as a former mayor wrote in this paper years ago..."Let them be a part of us" said the former mayor.

And "Mr. Carmel" himself, the late Frank Lloyd wrote: "The feeling of a community of spirit of sharing with neighbors in all the good things Carmel has thought to provide for its citizens and which it has so generously shared with those of the greater community. Come help us preserve the world-recognized beautiful and generous bounty of nature in our unrivaled setting between hills and the ocean, river and wildland." Mr. Carmel spoke for the future.

It is appropriate to remember in our festive mood also the past. Jeremiah, the prophet said (46-18): "As I live, saith the king, whose name is the lord of host, surely like Tabor among the mountains, and like Carmel-by-the-Sea, so shall He come." Carmel recieved its name from the Bible. May Carmel always be blessed and expand her magical artistic charm," as kid Kewin wrote year ago. Vivat, crescat, floreat!

Goodbye dam

Dear Editor:

Goodbye dam! Goodbye drought protection. Goodbye natural river and goodbye steelhead.

The decision to bring a dam to a vote without resolution by the state water board of the extremist demands of the California Department of Fish and Game and/or the U.S. Department of Fish and Wildlife will provide a field day for the anti-dam propagandists.

The same coalition, swept to office by the deceptive slogans, "Don't let the developers design the dam," and, "The developers want a large dam. Who do they want to pay for it?" is now designing a dam larger and more costly than necessary. Why? Ostensibly to satisfy Fish and Game. But they well know most voters are unlikely to approve spending millions of unnecessary dollars to benefit only fish.

A rational and informed state water board would moderate the unreasonable demands and reduce costs to a level much more likely to be approved by the voters. Is the avoidance of that cost-reducing decision the real reason for the premature and uninformed election?

The dismal prospect for the present water board and staff to ever get a dam built, or to provide any other means of substantial drought protection is the reason the Carmel City Council must proceed to get a fair share of available water for Carmel now.

EDITOR'S DESK

The next 70 years

"THERE COMES a time in the history of every village when it must either take upon itself greater responsibilities or go backward. It may not stand still. Carmel-by-the-Sea is at that point now."

These words appeared in an editorial in the Oct. 4, 1916 issue of The Carmel Pine Cone only weeks before its incorporation as a city. These words, however, can also be applied to Carmel today on the eve of its 70th anniversary.

Carmel today is definitely not standing still. Although it may be 70 years old it is not proceeding on fragile septugenarian legs, but the robust legs of a young adult. It could even be said that Carmel is breaking out into a jog after years of walking. The question is, where will these legs take us?

There's no doubt that Carmel is at a significant and critical crossroads now. A virtually all-new city council is headed into its second six months with a full head of steam; the general plan committee is revising the city's blueprint for the future; the planning commission has an entire new look — and more lenient outlook; changes are physically evident around the city; people are taking renewed pride in the city and its newfound fame. And to top it all ice cream cones will soon make their way back on Carmel streets.

But do we really know which way we're headed? Could it be time to lay off the accelerator a bit and ease on the brakes? Do we have a clear vision of the future of the city in which a true and honest balance is struck between the very significant interests of the residents and the desires of the business community?

Can we clearly see a future, 30, 50, even 70 years from now in which the "character of Carmel" is not only intact — preserved and protected, to quote from the city's "Magna Carta" — but serves as a model for other communities to emulate?

A hint of our future can be found in the two dozen or so essays that I read from Carmel Middle School students on what Carmel means to them.

Almost all these students shared the same concerns about their home: the beauty of Carmel, its tree-lined streets and white beaches, and on the opposite side, rampant tourism, traffic and development and the inevitable clash between these concerns. It's up to us now to help them preserve and protect what they cherish and to diminish the destructive forces that continually bear down on their dreams.

In the ensuing years Carmel must be ever wary of not only the direction it is headed in the future, but the speed in which it is taking those steps. The road is littered with communities that rushed headlong into what they believed was "progress" only to fall by the wayside, spent, used and with barely a future to look forward to.

To prepare and preserve ourselves for the future we have to have a clear vision of what we're striving for. To quote playwright Henrik Ibsen:

"I hold that man is in the right who is mostly closely in league with the future."

Happy birthday, Carmel and good luck in the next 70 years.

Excellent selection

Dear Editor:

This is a great country! When the political pendulum swings too far it always swings back to balance itself. The appointment of Bob Evans to the vacancy created by the death of Helen Arnold is an excellent illustration of this point. Helen loved Carmel and its residents. So does Bob as proven by his many years of selfless service to the community.

Proof? I was his successor as treasurer — trustee of the Harrison Memorial Library Board in 1976 and I asked for his help. He delivered voluminous records and correspondence with library authorities in the east that proved invaluable to me then and later.

I am sure he will be good for Carmel.

Council to review Beach Restoration Project

By DAVID LELAND

CARMEL RESIDENTS will have a chance for immediate response at next Tuesday's city council meeting when the council acts on the wishes expressed at the Monday town hall meeting regarding the Beach Restoration Project.

For the fourth month in a row the Carmel City Council will meet at 4 p.m. in the Carmel Woman's Club, located at Ninth Avenue and San Carlos Street.

At its Oct. 7 meeting the council agreed to allow Carmel residents a final opportunity to express their views for Phase II of the Beach Restoration Project.

Currently, the Beach Task Force has outlined plans for 104 parking spaces on Scenic Drive. These plans are contrary to the original architect's drawings which called for only 66 parking slots.

Along with action on the restoration project construction, the council will also hear a resolution authorizing the city to submit a grant application to the Coastal Conservancy to help defray construction costs, which carry a price tag of $700,000, according to Greg D'Ambrosio, director of administrative services.

D'Ambrosio said the city is seeking $200,000 in grant money.

ALSO AT its Nov. 4 meeting, the city council will receive a controversial report from the city's general plan committee.

The general plan committee is attempting to restore several ordinances to the Carmel General Plan; this month the report will deal with the land use element of the document — especially zoning.

Perhaps the most far-reaching change the general plan committee will suggest to the council will be the restoration of boundaries in the commercial district to pre-1984 conditions.

The existing business district is divided into three sub-districts: central commercial, service commerical and residential and limited commercial. These were established in 1984 to provide appropriate distribution of business of varying intensities and community impact.

If the general plan's recommendations are adopted at a later date, any type of commercial business would be able to locate within the commercial zone.

Incorporated within the change of commercial district boundaries is the elimination of a separate standard for Ocean Avenue.

This was initially established to protect the "unique qualities" of the commercial area, and was subject to conditional use permits.

"There is not a real need for separate standards for Ocean Avenue," said Bob Evans, city councilman and chairman of the general plan committee.

The general plan committee also will suggest the elimination of the so-called village preservation district from the general plan.

This district provides strict requirements and regulations and to preserve the "unique" architectural character of specific structures which have "contributed" to the city's historic development.

Evans said the village preservation district would be handled under a "significant building ordinance."

The final issue the general plan committee will introduce at the Nov. 4 meeting will be the redefinition of "adequate" parking with regard to the number of spaces required by new businesses.

Basically, the committee would require more parking spaces if an additional square footage is added to a structure. But if an existing building is merely subdivided or remodeled, such as the Sprouse-Reitz building on Ocean Avenue, no additional parking spaces would be required by its owners.

This ruling would reverse, in many cases, the controversial "in-lieu" parking deposit, which has developers pay the city $20,000 for each parking space they cannot provide for each 1,000 square feet of building space.

If the council approves the general plan's report, it will then send it to the planning commission for its recommendation. If the planning commission approves the ordinance changes by the general plan committee it will then be sent back to the city council for a vote.

At its Nov. 4 meeting the council will also:

• Consider the request from the Holman Highway Task Force requesting $10,000 for participation in Phase II of its feasibility study.

• Will receive a report regarding the Carmel Valley Master Plan. The county planning commission recently approved the subsequent environmental impact report to the final draft of the document. The board of supervisors began its hearings on the subsequent EIR Oct. 28 and will conduct its final hearing on Nov. 4 at 1:30 p.m. in the county courthouse in Salinas.

Meanwhile, the planning commission began the first of its two hearings on Oct. 29 regarding the actual plan.

• The council will hear a report from the community and cultural commission regarding establishment of a committee on sculptures in public places.

Some possible areas to be discussed by the committee would be sites where sculptures would be appropriate, the kinds of sculptures to be displayed, how to select the sculptures, how to fund the sculptures and how to preserve the sculptures.

It is recommended that the sculpture committee report its findings back to the city council within six months.

• The city council will receive a status report from city officials pertaining to the Pine Inn and Harrison Memorial Library annex complex. It is expected that the report will pertain to the status of the architect's plans.

• The Studio Theater Restaurant is scheduled to ask for a variance from a local ordinance which they claim is forcing them to maintain a wine and beer license, while being unable to sell the beverages.

Planners to review three important tracts of land

By NANCY HILLS

ONE PROPERTY is thick with trees and steep slopes, another is the estate of one of Carmel's more legendary residents, and the last is the largest section of land left in the city to develop.

The Carmel Planning Commission will review development plans for three of the most important properties in the city — the Bennett property, the Countess Kinnoull estate and the R-4 district — during a special study session at 3 p.m. Wednesday Nov. 5. in Carmel City Council Chambers.

The commission has moved its meeting time up an hour from 4 p.m. in order to begin their sessions right after its tour of the agenda sites. When tours are scheduled, it begins at 3 p.m. and the meetings start when the commission returns.

Though Nov. 5 is considered a study session, the meetings are open to the members of the public interested in Carmel's development.

•

THE BENNETT property is a 56,000 square foot parcel, owned by Louise Bennett, located at Dolores Street and Fourth Avenue and behind Hofsa's House motel off of San Carlos Street.

A large portion of the land consists of slopes over 30 percent and is situated on a natural water course that continues on under the Lincoln Street walkway bridge. The water is used by deer and other wildlife for drinking.

Attorney George Brehmer, representing Louise Bennett, and Bestor Engineers have proposed 11 single-family home building lots on the property and rechanneling the drainage area with pipe and a rock-lined canal. Because many significant oaks and pine trees would have to be cleared to make way for the homes, Brehmer has suggested replanting on the building sites.

The Carmel Planning and Conservation Committee of the planning commission has concurred with the Brehmer plan and will recommend it at the Nov. 5 meeting.

The most recent application represents a major change from the past stance of the city. Last January, the city reviewed the application and permitted the development of five lots, leaving the slopes in their natural state.

Planning Director Diane White explained the city's concerns revolved around:

• The natural drainage on the site, which could lead to flooding. Some flooding has been reported by current residents in the area in the past.

• Significant portions of the site are in excess of 30 percent slopes. Development of any property on a slope over 30 percent requires a use permit in Carmel and many cities do not permit building on such properties.

• There are a good many significant trees on the site, some of which would have to be removed.

• The area has difficult driveway access. The new plans call for extension of a small street off San Carlos Street next to Hofsa's House into the development and an separate access onto Dolores Street.

•

THE COMMISSION will also consider development of three parcels included in the Countess Kinnoull estate, located on the south ends of Torres Street and Eleventh Avenue and situated next to Mission Trails Park.

The estate includes a large 1920s home located on one parcel and gardens that extend from Mission Trails Park to the west side of Torres Street.

The home and lands were left to charitable organizations when the longtime Carmel resident and artist died about a year and a half ago. The estate is administered through a London solicitor and is represented here by attorney George Walker.

The property also sits on a natural drainage site, a situation the Countess handled by building a wooden flume to carry the water through her property. To develop the site, White explained that the city engineer has determined the flume would have to be replaced by either an open drainage ditch or a pipe.

The three properties are divided into:

• The first section, to the west of the house and would be between Torres Street and 11th Avenue if those byways were extended into the property.

Eleven building lots are proposed for that site, ending 11th Avenue at its furthest boundary and extention of Torres Street to deadend into 11th.

• The middle section which includes the home. Currrent plans are to perserve this portion with the home intact, but there is a possibility of creating two more lots off the parcel.

• The estate is in the process of negotiating with the city to incorporate the third portion into Mission Trails Park.

•

This zone is the largest single area planned for future development in the city and incorporates the upper Hayward Lumberyard on the east side of Junipero Avenue, the lower lumberyard on Fourth and Junipero avenues. Those two parcels contain the largest portions of the special zone that are subject to development.

Alan Williams, representing owners of the properties, has been negotiating with the city for two years over density, condominiums, and the types of commercial development allowed in the district. The city had specially zoned the area for multi-family dwelling units and as a buffer between the commercial and residential districts, but has so far disallowed building condominiums.

Happy 70th!

By DAVID LELAND

SPEAK MONDAY or forever hold your peace if you want to have a say in the Carmel Beach Restoration Project, or any other city business for that matter, outside of a city council meeting.

The Carmel City Council will be all ears at 6 p.m., Monday, Nov. 3, in the theater at Sunset Center for a town hall meeting, which is designed especially for residents who want to voice an opinion in city matters but don't want to get involved in the political process at city council meetings.

Phase II of the Carmel Beach Restoration Project is on the council's Nov. 4 agenda the following evening, so any opinions voiced by citizens concerning that issue at the town hall meeting will still be fresh in the councilmembers' minds.

At its Oct. 4 meeting the Beach Task Force presented its report to the city council, which outlined plans for 104 parking spaces on Scenic Drive, where storm damage had occurred during the floods of 1983. These plans are contrary to the original architect's drawings which called for only 66 parking slots.

Councilmembers at that time unanimously agreed to hold a town hall meeting, the first in almost a year, to provide an adequate forum for interested residents to be heard.

But for Carmelites not interested in beach parking, Monday will also be a time to bring out any other issues on their minds.

Mayor Clint Eastwood, who promised during his campaign to let all residents take part in city government, has taken Nov. 3 as an opportunity to make good on that promise.

It should be noted that, while the entire city council will be present, the town hall meeting is not a decision-making event. That is reserved for city council meetings.

The format will be such that all residents who wish to be heard will sign up at the beginning of the meeting with their name and topic — all will be heard. The meeting is open-ended.

"Everybody can come and everybody can speak," said Jeanne Brehmer, city clerk. "That's the object of it."

Master plan hearings continue for county

By DAVID LELAND

THE COUNTY Board of Supervisors began its hearings on the Carmel Valley Master Plan Tuesday as it conducted public testimony regarding the subsequent draft to the final environmental impact report.

The hearings will continue at 1:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 4, in the supervisors chambers in the county couthouse in Salinas.

"I was so relieved to have the date before us after all these years," said Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman, referring to the numerous delays in the past seven years.

Strasser Kauffman said the board received a "full range of data" at the hearing from private citizens, attorneys and groups representing interests in the Carmel Valley.

Oct. 28 marked the end of public testimony concerning the EIR portion of the supervisors' hearings on the plan. The public will, however, be allowed to testify at the board's master plan meetings. These are tentitively scheduled for Nov. 25 and Dec. 9.

Condo design approved

One down, four continued for Carmel planners

By NANCY HILLS

EARL WALLS received final design approval for a four condominium unit on Junipero Avenue Oct. 22 from the Carmel Planning Commission, but four other major items were continued until November.

One of the items was continued to give the architect time to prove to the many neighbors gathered at the meeting that the planned home would not be as large as they feared.

In addition to Walls' project, commissioners approved a 4,561 square foot home on San Antonio, a use permit for a gourmet food basket shop on Fifth Avenue and a hat shop in the Court of the Fountains.

Walls' condomimium project on the west side of Junipero Avenue between Fourth and Fifth avenues was given its final design approval without much discussion, though Commissioner Carla Ramsey expressed a concern over the black asphalt roof. The project consists of four two-story condominiums around an interior patio, brown-stained plywood siding and a six parking space underground garage.

Commissioner Olof Dahlstrand said the design review committee felt it was a "very well-designed project" and Walls explained that the other buildings surrounding it also had asphalt roofs.

"It was a matter of compatibility with the design," he said.

Ramsey still voted against its approval.

Construction will have to wait until the city council lifts its building moratorium and the water situation is settled. Carmel has put itself under an emergency building moratorium because it reached 99.99 percent use of its water allocation from the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District this year.

Though the Walls condominiums were the largest project on the agenda, it was a residential design application that received the most attention from the audience.

•

NEIGHBORS CONTINUED their opposition to a home planned by architect Ray Martin for Mr. and Mrs. George Raz on the westside of Carmelo between Ocean and Seventh avenues. The application had been continued from the commission's Oct. 8 meeting. The commission asked architect Ray Martin to change his design to address the neighbors concerns about height and privacy in their yards.

The new plan, presented at the Oct. 22 meeting, lowered a portion of the roof by a couple of feet, changed it to a flat roof, and redesigned the plans from a two-story to a split-level house.

Despite the changes, across-the-street neighbors Bill and Jane Holmes claim it would block their view and Harold and Irene Williams told the commissioners added balconies would destroy the privacy of their patio.

Linda Smith read a letter from neighbor Helen Schula that objected to the invasion of privacy by the larger home.

"We've looked for a long time in Carmel for the perfect home and now we found it," Irene Williams said. "It had a private patio but now if this is built with the balconies, we might as well invite them in for dinner."

However, architect Ray Martin claimed the home would not intrude on anyone's privacy and that the roofline was below the view line of the Holmes house. Bill Holmes disputed that claim, saying he had done his own measurements that proved it would.

Commissioner Olof Dahlstrand, an archictect, said he felt from looking at the plans that the view would not be blocked to the extent the Holmes claimed.

"I hear the concern of some of the neighbors who see the problem as more severe then I do. It's impossible to build or change anything in Carmel without affecting someone's vista," he said.

Commissioner Bruce Roberts concurred with Dahlstrand, stating he believed the size of the home "was not out of keeping with the neighborhood."

A motion by Dahlstrand to approve the house with a condition that the carport be moved to save an oak tree on the property failed with Dahlstrand, Roberts and Commissioner Bill Brown casting the unsuccessful affirmative votes.

The commission decided to vote to continue the application after Commissioner Ed Hicks pointed out that the architect was to have put a "stick" up on the present home to indicate where the roofline would be and therefore ease the minds of the protestors. The continuance would give time for Martin to accomplish that task, Chairman Ken White said, and the motion carried unanimously.

IN OTHER business, the commission:

• Approved a 4,561 square foot, five-bathroom addition to a home on the east side of San Antonio Street between Second and Fourth avenues. Applicant Lee Hill had previously requested a lot split for the 10,7871 fan-shaped lot, but Carmel city ordinances prohibit adding new building sites along the part of the city closest to the beach. Hill had wanted to tear down the cottage currently on the double lot and build two homes.

The present planned single-family home meets building site coverage codes, though its size was a concern for some commissioners.

"I'm not happy with the sheer size of the place," Dahlstrand said, but added that he saw no legal reason for turning the application down.

"It's rather large for Carmel," Ramsey said, and added that it was a "massive undertaking" and she would like to see landscaping plans for the home to mitigate its impact.

White said he was uncomfortable with the "large home" situated at one of the entrances to the city (near the Pebble Beach gate).

But Brown added,"It's not the only large house on the block. There's one right across the street as well and one around the corner."

"The only alternative the city has left here would to have allowed him to split the lot. It's an awfully large house for Carmel," Roberts said.

But Hill told the commissioners he had purposefully set the home back from the road to alleviate the impact of its size.

The commission approved the application, with White and Roberts voting no, with the condition that landscaping plans be submitted prior to issuance of the final permits.

• Continued an application by Jack Brushert, new owner of the Hacienda Mexican food restaurant on the corner of Dolores Street and Fifth Avenue. Brushert applied for a change in his use permit so the restaurant can sell hard liquor. Currently he has a license to sell only beer and wine.

The commissioners were told by the planning staff that in order to comply with the ordinance on the sale of hard liquor, they would have to find that food would be for sale during the hours the liquor was sold and the business was primarily an eating place; the interior would be designed so there would not be a separate area for drinking, such as a cocktail lounge; and that the sale of liquor would be from a non-public service bar, or not one that people could stand or sit at to order.

Staff Planner Brian Roseth stated that a consideration could be that it would be next to a planned senior citizen housing complex, the area on the northwest corner of Dolores Street and Fifth Avenue which is now being used as a parking lot.

Brushert had not submitted plans to the city so the item was continued until more information was available.

The commission listened to one steady customer of the restaurant, Barbara Brooks, who said she felt that Brushert, through remodeling and additions to the menu, created a very pleasant atmosphere in the place and it would not degenerate into a troublesome bar if the permit was granted.

One person, Hal Willard, said he didn't "really believe" another hard liquor place in Carmel was appropriate.

• Continued until Nov. 12 an application by Julian Bills to convert a residence on the east side of Lincoln Street between Sixth and Fifth avenues into commercial property. Bills had not submitted enough plans to the city for the commission to make a decision on the matter.

• Approved a use permit for Robert and Cindi Johnston to sell gourmet food baskets and kitchenware from the former Adam's Pot Belly Stove on Fifth Avenue between Junipero Avenue and Mission Street.

Students inject new life into youth center

By DAVID LELAND

EVEN THOUGH the adults are supposedly the ones with political and cultural savvy, the younger set has taken the steering wheel at the Carmel Youth Center and are providing a source of direction — reminding many parents of days gone by.

During the '50s and '60s the youth center was teeming with activity — it was truly the hub of Carmel youth. But this changed in the 70s when it no longer was "cool" to hang out at the center, according to Tom Faia, youth council adult representative.

"The youth center lost touch with what was trendy," Faia said. "The place turned into a ghost youth center."

Enter the youth council — a group of seven high school youngsters with a vision. Its first task was to find out just what would be popular with other students; what would make them want to come to the youth center. So the council conducted a marketing survey at Carmel High School and Robert Louis Stevenson School.

About 500 students were polled in the 800-student schools, with the 11-question survey being answered on either a scale of one to 10 or "yes or no" basis.

"We can't go on what we think would work," explained Robin Marzi, youth council member. "We have to go on the majority. We don't want to put the time and money into something for nothing."

The survey revealed several interesting things:

• Physical appearance was extremely important to the students planning on attending youth center functions. Out of the 460 responses to this question more than 400 answered that they considered appearance important.

• The music most students (325) wanted to hear played at the first dance — scheduled for January in the newly sound-proofed auditorium — is rock. The least favorite style of music by students is country.

• The most popular type of activity desired at the youth center would be hot tubbing. The youth council said it plans to install a hot tub in the rear of the center as soon as the water moratorioum is lifted.

• And for the favorite type of food, most people preferred pizza over hamburgers by a slight margin.

•

NO MATTER what the activity, it is apparent that it will be left up to the youth council to decide what will and will not take place at the center.

"We need to fill the expectations of the children of the '80s," said Kristen Andrews, youth council member. "We need more interesting things."

Whatever the youth council is doing seems to be working. In the last two weeks membership at the youth center has risen from 10 to more than 200 students, Faia said.

It should be noted that the youth council members are not merely paperpushers who conduct marketing surveys — they also do hard work along with other volunteer members.

On Oct. 26, a Sunday, more than 70 students spent three hours cleaning out the storage area which will house a weight room and aerobic dance area in the basement of the youth center. Money for the weight room is being donated by Mayor Clint Eastwood; architectural design is also a free commodity.

The weight room will also be available for civic organizations such as the police and fire departments to use. But the youths will always have top priority, said Jeff Bell, youth center director.

Faia calls this entire process Phase I of the youth center project. Here it is decided what will be done and what the priorities are for the youth center. For a glimpse at Phase II, one has to attend the garden party to be held on Nov. 16 in the rear of the youth center.

Faia said 20,000 invitations are being printed and will be mailed out to "every household" in Carmel, Carmel Valley and Pebble Beach.

"We're looking for services, materials or dollars," Faia said. "We need that old-time community spirit. We're trying to capture the spirit of the '50s."

Indeed, talking to the youth council one can feel the enthusiasm as the youngsters spread the word.

"We're getting them (students) into it," Marzi said. "They're catching the fever; they can see what's being done."

Last week Domino's Pizza got into the act and donated a pizza oven to the youth center, Faia said.

Another change to take place at the youth center will be to allow younger children a chance at the activities. Currently only high school students are allowed privileges, but soon youngsters as young as sixth-grade will be enjoying the center, Faia said.

"This is a way to get younger kids to know about the youth center and to be excited about it," he said.

Faia said many events will be segregated, with age limits set at certain functions such as dances.

There is already an offshoot of the youth council which will concentrate on travel. It is called the "trip committee."

Carmel High School band blowing a bright new tune

By DEIDI KRAMER

WHEN RICHARD Robins arrived at Carmel High School in September his goal was "to give everyone in the school a chance to play a musical instrument."

While not everyone has taken him up on his offer yet, exciting things have been happening in the high school music department. In the brief month and a half since Robins arrived, his newly formed groups have played for three home football games, the Carmel Rotary Club, the Homecoming Parade down Ocean Avenue, and are now in active rehearsal for their first concert, "The New Beginning," at Sunset Center Dec. 4.

The concert will feature the Carmel High School Jazz Ensemble, Concert Band and Orchestra along with guest performances from violinist Misha Rosenker, Vincent Gomez, conductor of the Monterey County Youth Symphony, and a "surprise" guest artist. Robins has promised that musically, there will be "something for everyone."

While Robins is busy with his students, the CUSD Music Boosters has been raising the funds needed to finance the many projects planned for this year. Bright red jackets with "Carmel High Padre Band" on the back were purchased for each student. Tuxedos and formal accessories have been ordered just in time for the first concert. At every home football game, the Music Boosters sponsor a refreshment booth which has raised nearly $1,500 thus far.

On Oct. 17, the Music Boosters co-sponsored the year's first Carmel Middle School Dance and Barbecue at the Youth Center with the Carmel Middle School Music Deparmtent under Karen King. The highly successful event earned over $700 for our district's music programs.

According to Robin's recent interview with Johnny Adams on radio station KRML, the level of enthusiasm (in the CHS music program) is building. "There is no doubt in my mind that we're going to build a program that will be second to none."

Community members and businesses are encouraged to support Carmel music programs by joining the CUSD Music Boosters. For information, please call Sharen Carey at 624-3652.

'What Carmel Means to Me': Students reveal feelings

(Editor's Note: The following essays were written by Carmel Middle School seventh- and eighth-graders, who were asked to write on the theme "What Carmel Means to Me" in conjunction with the city of Carmel's 70th birthday celebration.)

By KEREN ROBERTSON

To everyone Carmel means something different, but to me, it also means something special. Carmel was the first place I lived when I moved to the United States. Also, it's a great place to go with my friends. Carmel also means a lot to me because of the beaches. Carmel has many great qualities.

When I moved to the United States, the first place I lived was Carmel. Carmel was the first "taste" of America I got. It was gorgeous! The scenery was really different and so was the weather. The people were very nice and kind. I was really glad that we had moved here and not somewhere else.

'Carmel means a lot of things to me in different ways. There is only one question left in my mind. What would my life be like without Carmel?'

Carmel is also a great place to go with my friends. There are lots of things I can do I can go to the plaza and look around at the stores, or go wandering up and down the streets finding small gift stores and exotic places tucked away in nooks and crannies. I can go to the beach or take a friend out for a meal at one of the many fabulous restaurants scattered plentifully around Carmel. Carmel is a great place to go with my friends.

Carmel also means a great deal because of the gorgeous beaches. I have always loved beaches and I'm sure I always will, but I especially love the Carmel beaches. If I start walking at the lagoon beach, I can keep on going for a few miles, never leaving the beach. It's great! Also the ocean off Carmel beach is so many different shades of blue and greens that it's spectacular! Sometimes the water is a deep rich blue, other days it's a clear turquoise.

Carmel means a lot of things to me in different ways. There is only one question left in my mind, though. What would my life be like without Carmel?

By NICOLE HENARES

As I arise from my place of slumber, I climb and open the window to let the warm sunbeam of "Mr. Sunshine" in, I see the glorious white beach, I smell the fresh sea air, I feel the nippiness in that sea air, and I hear the tremendous waves crashing along the shore. For a minute my mind dozes off from this scenic view of my window and I don't know who I am, where I am, and what I am doing. Then I realize (feeling quite stupid) that I am in Carmel, The-Miracle-by-the-Sea.

The beach in Carmel is so glorious, it fascinates tourists with the roar of the ocean waves, pounding along the shore, leaving white foam along the rocks. The unique white sand stretches as far as the human eye can see. Some are awed by the softness of the sand and how amazingly white it is. The smell and feel of the cool sea air is very unique to find on any other place along the shore, except Carmel.

Carmel is The-Miracle-by-the-Sea. Tourists around the world come to see the place that people say is a wonderland. From the time of the Spanish settlers people were awed by this miraculous town, and Carmel has been known as a tourist attraction ever since.

I shut my window and sit in a white wicker chair with ease, and I think, yes I am lucky to live in such a gorgeous place. It is all those things but yet I was forgetting something, something, much more important than all of those things put together. Carmel is not just a wonderland. It is my place of belonging, it is my home.

By CLAS BROWN

What Carmel means to me is walking up to my favorite shops, the Carmel Mission and tourists. These are all things that remind me of my home Carmel-by-the-Sea.

When I am bored or just want to spend my money, I just walk right up the Serra Trails and into town. There are so many shops filled with peple it sometimes gets a little crowded. My favorite shops are the Game Gallery, whose employees I know, and Orange Julius, which has now been taken down. What made the loss of Orange Julius even more painful was that there are now no fast food places in Carmel.

Sometimes I like to go up to Mediterranean Market, order a large sandwich and a cola, and eat in the park. Another reason Carmel is so convenient is that my dad works in the Zantman Art Gallery.

The Carmel Mission is one of the main attractions in Carmel and a beautiful sight. I live right near the mission and I can always hear the sound of the bells ringing. There is a museum and courtyard which can be visited many a time. The mission also holds a private school and a baseball field. The mission has many events, including the yearly fiesta, which is always lots of fun, not to mention Mass on Sundays.

A new tourist attraction to Carmel is Clint Eastwood, yet another reason to visit Carmel. Tourists from all over the go into the shops and go down to the beach. There are no traffic lights in Carmel so that makes it even more crowded. The tourists are usually dressed in the most colorful clothes they can find and they always have cameras. There is one thing I like about tourists and that is they are such a large industry in Carmel.

When I think of these things, I will always be proud of where I live. My town has been getting more attention than ever lately and that make me feel good about my home, Carmel.

By ALEX STOTT

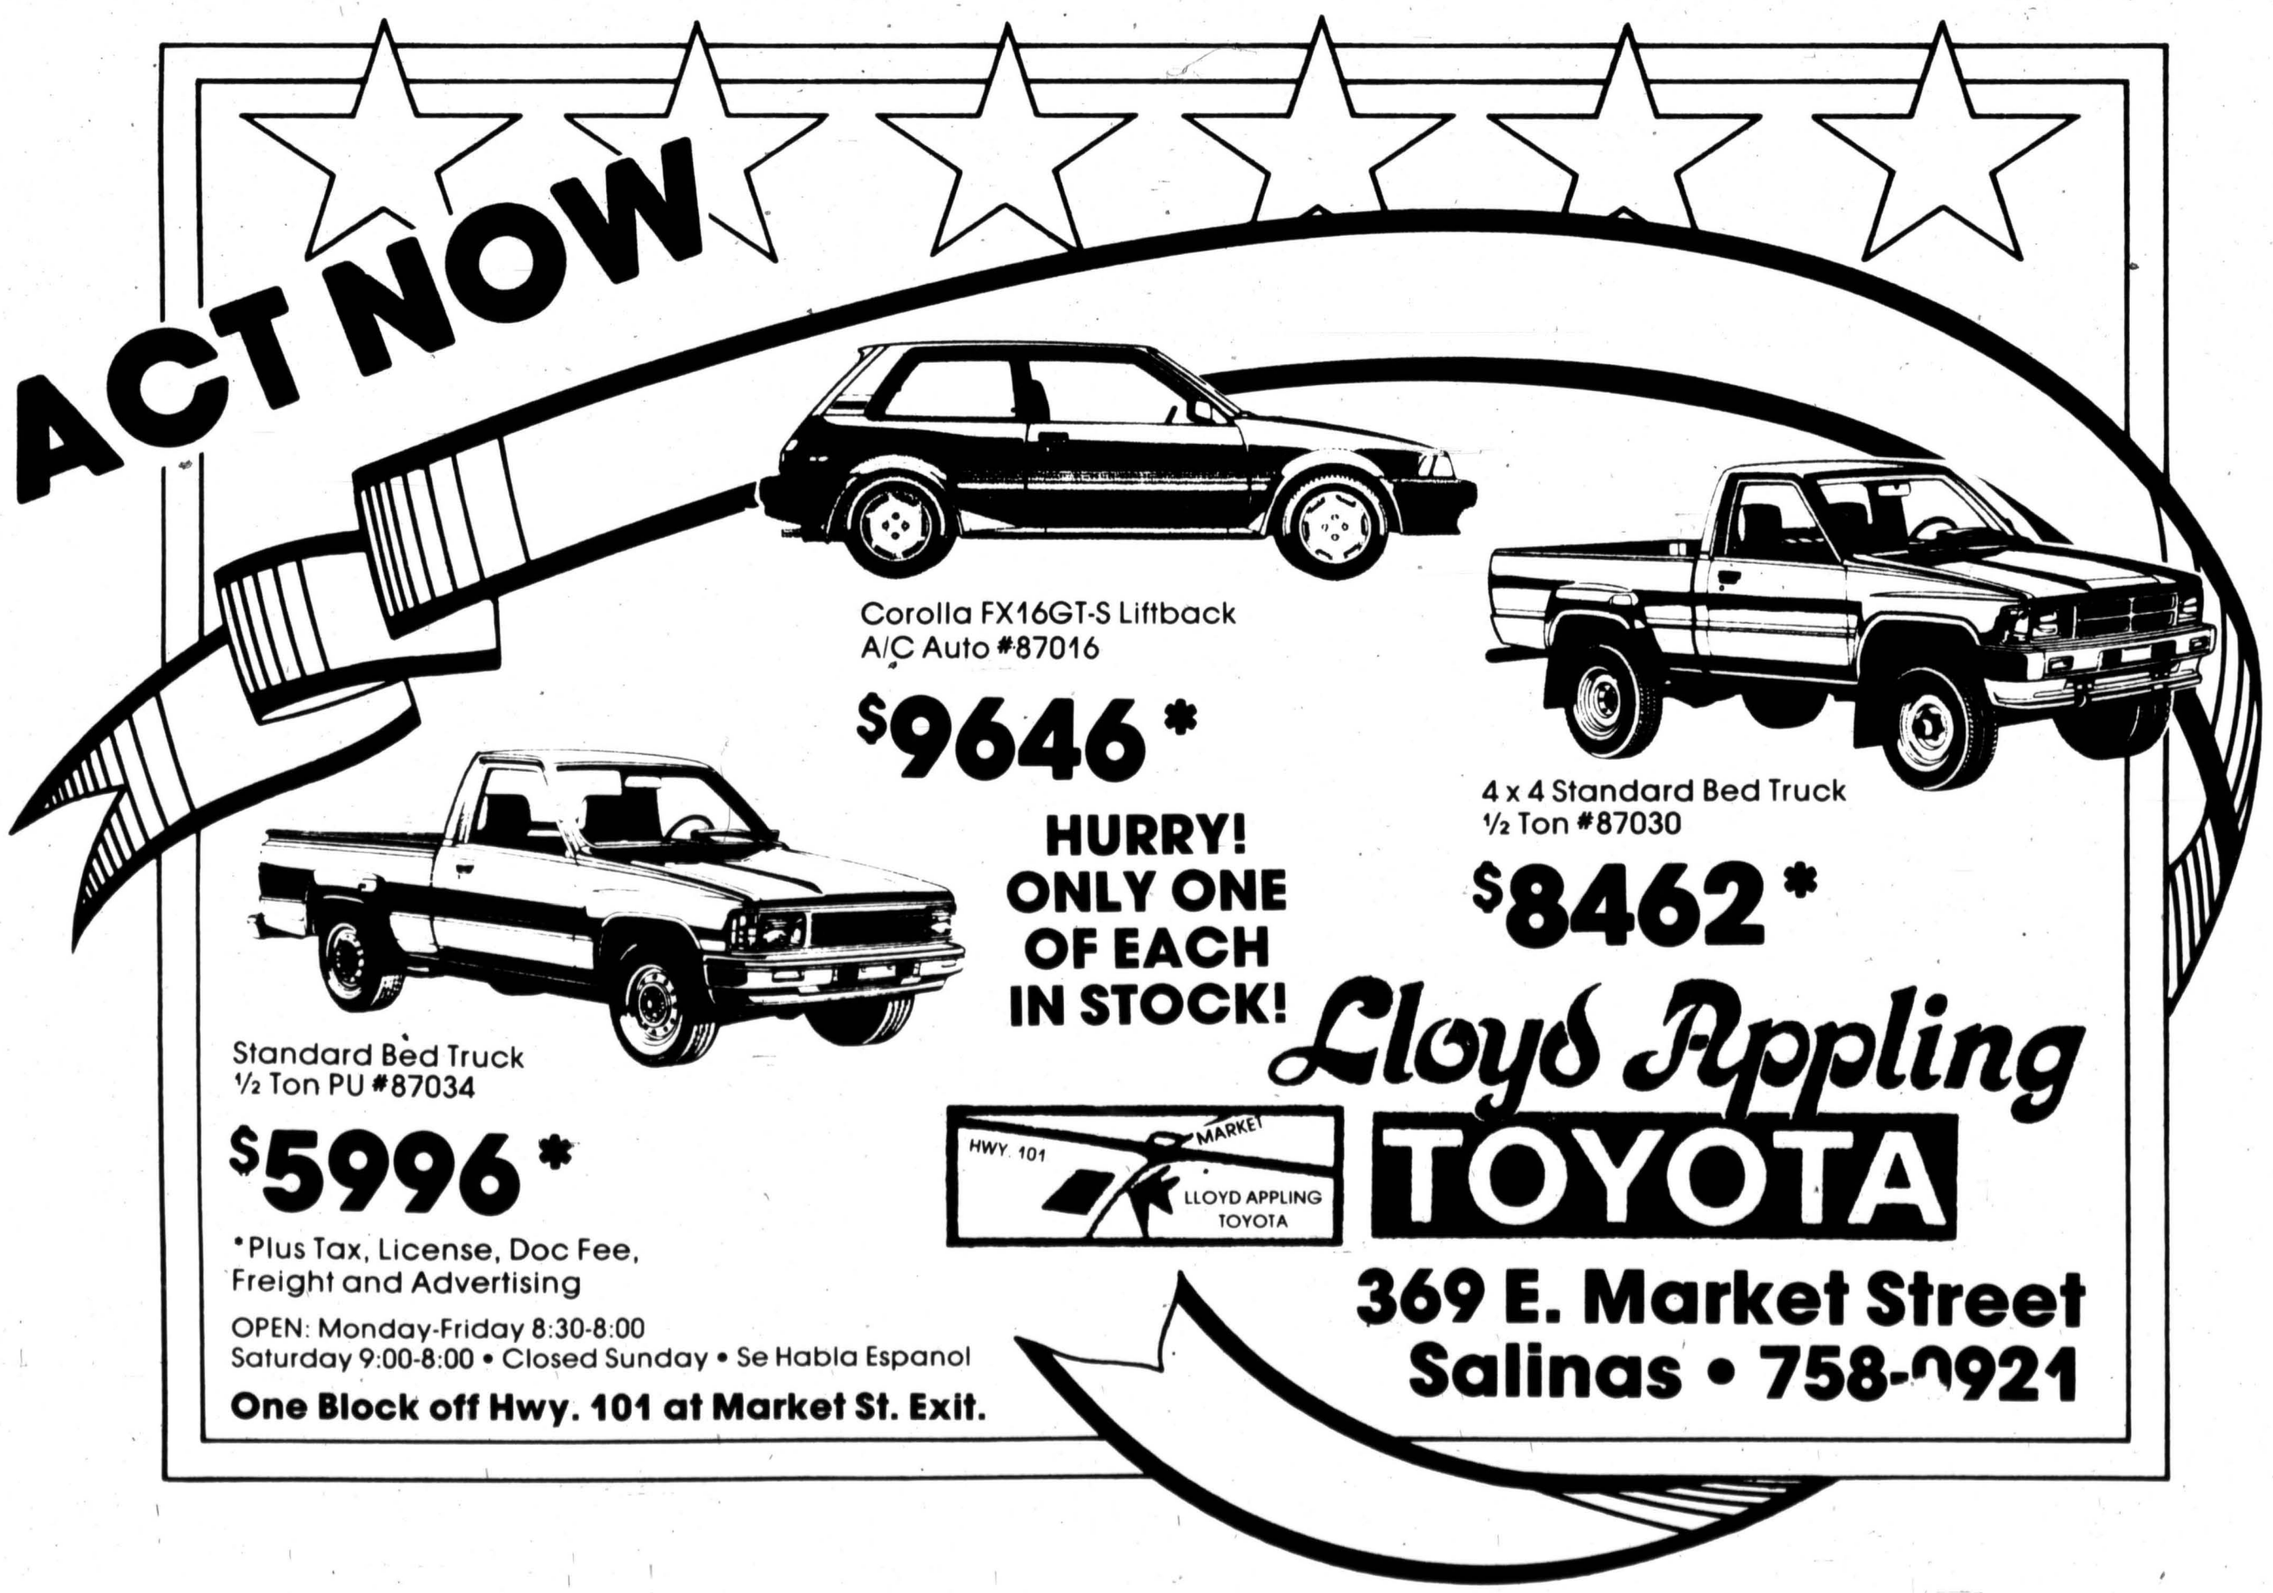

Carmel is a beautiful place. I have lived here all my life. The trees tell the most about Carmel. They grow everywhere, even in the middle of streets. There are squirrels in them, flags in them, and Christmas tree lights in them. You have to get permission from the forestry people to cut them down. The trees are beautiful in the dark fog covering the white beach. Against the beach, the ocean can be many different colors. It is sometimes blue with white surf, or gray black with pounding waves against the seawall.

As you climb the sandy hill up to the town, you pass cottages, plain and fancy. The town has lots of little shops. I like to visit The Cookie Place, the Game Gallery, The Candyman of Carmel, The Nature Company, The Wooden Horse, Wishart's Bakery, and Carmel Plaza.

When I was little, my mom would take me to see goldfish in the park. Now I can walk down to my dad's store in the Pine Inn. I wash the windows for him. It is fun to watch people go by from the balcony of my dad's store.

Most of the people in Carmel are tourists, but the nicest ones are the people who live here. Betty at Top Notch always helps me find good clothese to wear. Mrs. Fremier always helps find books at the library for me. April cuts my hair at the Carmel Cutting Room. Jeff at the Game Gallery always helps me find good gifts. The most famous person in Carmel is The Mayor, Clint.

Although I've never met him, he seems to be a good mayor. My dad thinks he is helping business and my brother says Clint came to a pep rally at the high school. The town people are used to having a movie star as a mayor! I really don't care who the mayor is, because Carmel should be famous for its beauty and its people, not just its mayor, and I think it is.

Students reveal thoughts about their home Carmel

By SARA WISE

As I walk along the sandy beach, soft blue waves try to pull me into the ocean. I look toward the sea to watch surfers ride the dangerous waves. As the cool wind blows on my face, I turn away to look at the tree-lined roads. All I can see are expensive cars carrying fancy presents up and down private drives to cocktail parties and birthday dinners.

I think of how soon it will be until I will be licking smooth ice cream into my mouth by a tongue aroused by the sweet-tasting treat on a cone.

It's getting dark, so now I shove my shoes onto my sandy feet. I start to walk toward the road, and I hear some dogs bark at what must be a throng of seagulls. I turn around just in time to see the sun set, surrounded by majestic clouds of the colors pink, purple, yellow, and orange. I watched the glorious sight until it has disappeared, leaving a dark cloud hovering over Carmel.

I soon start back up the hill towards the road. When I finally reach the road, I look up to the store-filled streets ahead of me and realize that I have a long way to walk before I reach my final destination.

During my treacherous journey up along the sidewalk, I stop to glare at the amazing pictures in the windows. When it seems my legs couldn't take another step, I spot my father's blazing red Mazda in front of me.

To me Carmel-by-the-Sea means a home, a preservation of the past, and an all-around beautiful city.

By TIFFANI MEHEEN

I have lived in the same house in Carmel all my life and I never want to leave. I have gone to three different schools, Woods (Briarcliff now), River, and recently Carmel Middle School and they've been great. I've also met a lot of friends through them.

I like to walk downtown sometimes with a friend praying that I'll see Mr. Eastwood. Anyway the stores downtown are really great and fun to look through...if you can, because the tourists walk so slow.

I also love the beaches in Carmel. They are uncrowded and uncluttered (except on holidays). The sand is soft and fine and the beaches are the prettiest sight in Carmel at sunset. Early in the morning my mom or dad takes my dogs, Moose and Snodgrass, running on the beach; that is the dogs' favorite place. My family and I also love to go down to the beach and have a party. However I wish the water was as warm as the water in Hawaii, and the weather was more predictable so I could enjoy Carmel even more.

On a scale from one to 10, I give Carmel a nine.

Tularcitos School An Overview

By JAMES KOHNKE
Tularcitos School principal

TULARCITOS ELEMENTARY School is located adjacent to the Carmel Valley Village. It Serves students in a rather large attendance area which extends along the valley, beginning at Quail Lodge in the west and continuing almost to Greenfield in the east. Because of the large size of our attendance area, busing is an important and expensive factor.

Our enrollment has grown in the last two years. We currently have just under 400 students, ranging from kindergarten to fifth-grade.

Our staff is composed of sixteen regular classroom teachers and five teachers in special programs. The support staff of secretaries, custodians, instructional aides, librarian, etc., 18 in all, add much to the quality of our program. Eight part-time aides work directly with teachers in the classroom. They are provided by special state funds designated for school improvement.

This year we nearly have three classes at each grade level. The average class size is a comfortable 25 students per class, which is instrumental in providing a good learning environment for both students and teachers.

In addition to our core program, we have a number of special programs which are unique at Tularcitos. They are as follows: The Hearing Impaired Program, which is operated by the Monterey County Office of Education, has had a very positive effect on our whole school. Most of these students attend regular classes with our students and are assisted by interpreters.

The Cooperative Pre-School, also located on our campus, provides a smooth transition for young children to the kindergarten in a familiar environment.

The Special Day Class and the Resource Specialist Program are both designed to provide prescribed assistance in the major subject area. These are both special education programs funded by the state and district for students who experience difficulty in the regular program and need additional assistance.

Other programs are: Music, taught to each class for one period per week, which includes choral singing, music theory, and music appreciation. Fourth and fifth-graders may choose to also take instrumental music once a week. Chapter I is a federally-funded program to assist students having difficulty with reading. English as a Second Language, a state-funded program, helps limited and non-English speaking students to learn our language.

Each year our staff, in conjunction with our School Site Council, determines the academic areas of focus. This year we will be implementing our new science curriculum at all grade levels. We will also be investigating new ideas and materials to support our math curriculum. Continued emphasis will be given to our written language program, which was started two years ago and has proven to be very successful.

This past year has also been a major year for physical improvement at Tularcitos. Four classrooms have been repainted and carpeted, the office and the faculty room have been remodeled and made more efficient. The grounds and buildings at Tularcitos have recently been receiving more attention than they have received in many years.

These positive changes are due in part to the creative and well-thought-out redirection of resources and manpower, which has been an important goal of our new district administrators. Two other important areas of district support are: a director of curriculum and increased psychological support at the school sites.

Our parents and Parent Club are truly our greatest source of ongoing support. They are there on a day-to-day basis as well as provide great assistance with items such as a copier, field trips and much more. In this same arena of direct financial support to schools is FOCUS, an organization which has continued to provide much-needed equipment for our school.

At Tularcitos we also have an excellent resource which provides additional books, materials and training in the area of reading. It is the Sylvia W. Schwarz Endowment for Reading Improvement, which was established by the Schwarz family, along with the Schwarz Fitness Center, especially for our school.

As you might guess, things are progressing at Tularcitos School. Both local and state tests scores, among many other indicators, reflect our continued growth. If you are interested in finding out more about our school, please come and visit us. It would be a sincere pleasure to share our school with you.

Jazzed up Homecoming

ALTHOUGH NOT as thrilling as Carmel's last-minute victory over Monterey, last Saturday's Carmel versus King City homecoming football game attracted many spectators.

Carmel utilized its powerful "air" offense to outshine its opponent with a shutout score of 21-0. The reasons for such as outstanding crowd turnout were predominantly football-oriented, but there were other homecoming highlights that added entertainment to "jazz up" an otherwise generic football game.

Many people anticipated the halftime parade, which gave the spectators a chance to admire the lovely Homecoming Court. The court, consisting of Queen Jackie Gardner, First Attendant Laurie Hayes, Second Attendant Shannon Moore, Sophomore Princess Yvette Lyon, and Freshman Princess Becca Sampson, was driven around the track in convertibles.

Immediately following the girls came the class floats. For weeks each class met at designated houses to put together its idea of a winning float.

This year the juniors captured the title from the seniors with their aquarium float entitled "Feed Them to the Sharks." The eyecatcher on the junior float was a brave junior girl sporting a sequined mermaid costume, reclining in front of schools of paper fish and sharks.

Second place was a toss-up between the sophomores' Californian "Wipe 'em Out" float and the freshmen "Burn the Mustangs" entry. The seniors "Moon the Mustangs," displaying a Padre sending a King City football player to the moon via rocket, wound up third.

Many faces in the crowd were those of alumni. Homecoming was a time of reunion as well as celebration. In the third quarter a Carmel victory seemed inevitable, and fans became more relaxed and talkative. Old friends ate hamburgers with alumni and listened to the new Padre Band play. Just for a second it felt as if it were last year once again. When the game ended, so did the illusion and everyone realized it was time to go home. But before parting, couples danced that night to sounds of Jungle Arrow at the Doubletree Inn, just for old time's sake.

Carmel sanitary board opposes Prop. 61

THE BOARD of directors of the Carmel Sanitary District voted unanimously to oppose the passage of Proposition 61 on the Nov. 4 ballot at its Oct. 16 meeting.

The action was taken after thorough analysis of possible impacts of the controversial pay limitation initiative by district staff, legal counsel and members of the board of directors, according to Kenneth McGinnis, board president.

In taking the action McGinnis said the board agrees with other organizations, including the California Association of Sanitation Agencies, California League of cities and the city of Carmel, in urging the voters to reject the proposition, which he called an "insidious restrictive measure."

A "no" vote on Proposition 61 was urged by the board for the following reasons, McGinnis said:

• The proposed measure is poorly drafted, replete with major ambiguities and does not accomplish its original purpose — to curb a few outrageous public pensions. In fact, he said, it could increase pension costs generally.

• It puts caps on salaries of the governor and chief executives of the state, university professors and medical and law school salaries into the state Constitution. Salaries and benefits have never been in the Constitution, but have always been considered negotiable by governing boards. This makes it nearly impossible for public entities to complete with private business for the services of competent and quality personnel, he said.

• Possible buy-back of vested interests of public personnel in accumulated sick leave and vacation is estimated statewide to cost as much as $7 billion. Thus, taxes could increase rather than decrease.

• Lawsuits over Proposition 61 could clutter that state courts for years; in the meantime, leaving public employees in a state of limbo about such matters as accumulated sick leave, vacations, etc.

• Proposition 61 would lower the high average quality of public service throughout the state by lowering morale of employees because of uncertain financial insecurities.

Children carry on arts tradition in Carmel

By DAVID LELAND

IF THE artwork displayed by the youngsters at Carmel River School for the city's Halloween poster contest is any indication of talent, the city is in no danger of its art colony status disappearing.

Upwards of 500 entries were originally competing for the three top prizes for each grade level. These drawings were sifted through by Sande Falahati and Judith Reese, poster-parade organizers, and the number cut in half for the judging process.

By the time the three judges arrived in the library at River School Thursday at noon, the children were walking on eggshells to see who would have their art displayed in downtown merchants' windows. And, more importantly, who would receive gift certificates from Rosemary and George, a children's clothing store in Carmel.

The first- and second-place winners received $5 gift certificates and the third-place winners were given a $3 voucher.

During the 45 minutes when art judges Eldon Dedini, Brenda Morrison and Coldie Whitman perused the colorful drawings, several students took time out from their lunch hour to view the competition. They stretched up on their tiptoes and pressed their noses against the glass pane in the door hoping to get a look at the winners.

Last year the students were allowed to come in the library to get a firsthand view of the judging, Reese said, but this year the organizers had decided to let the judges concentrate and "mellow it out."

The posters, all of them fantastic in their own right, were not something thrown together for the contest. Students at River School began preliminary drawings at the end of September, according to art teacher Geralyn Maul.

"They would start them and then throw them out," she said. "Then, they would draw rough drafts."

Maul said the students were encouraged to come up with a subject and work with it until they were satisifed, instead of drawing a different picture each day in art class. While Halloween was the main theme for the drawings, several posters also recognized the city's 70th birthday celebrations to be held on Oct. 31.

THE POSTER contest at Carmel River School was fun for all, even if you didn't come in first. Here, kindergarteners Alexandra Bottemanne and Mattew Vogelpohl examine some of the creations drawn to celebrate Carmel's 70th birthday. (Holly McFarland photo.)

The end result was all of the kids participating in Carmel's Halloween celebration.

"This (the poster contest) is my favorite part of the parade," Reese said. "They all have a chance to do this." Reese said many of the children are not able to take part in the actual marching in the parade because their parents work and no supervision is available for them.

Grades kindergarten through five entered drawings in the contest, with the level of expertise often astonishing the judges.

"They were very creative with a high level of imagination," said Whitman, a professional local artist, after the judging had been completed. "They are not settled in with preconceived ideas. They do their own thing and get by with it."

Morrison agreed. "I think the children are very creative. They also have some good teachers here."

To judge the posters, the officials took one grade at a time and laid each picture out on the floor. They then they kneeled down and began the task of finding the top three posters plus one to receive honorable mention. This was not always an easy job.

"Grab the ones you think are possible," said Dedini, who is famous for his cartoons in the New Yorker, Esquire and Playboy. "Then we'll wrestle for the answer."

The judging began with the kindergarten classes' entries. The winner was Adam Struve, whose poster boldly presented his first name in red paint across the top. The lower half of the picture was occupied by the drawing of a man and a pumpkin as they are circled by a bat.

The first-graders developed their posters with watercolors, instead of oil-based paints. The winner in this category was Jesse Christensen, whose poster had several figures in a myriad of colors ranging from purple and blue to yellow and green.

"We love the brilliance of colors and the washes that they used," Morrison said.

The second-grade entries ended with Jason Waller and Adam Zurbe in a tie for first place. A drawing of a white ghost with two black eyes and a crooked smile was challenged by a poster with "cum to the parade — cum all" across the top. The bottom of the second poster showed the tops of spectators' heads.

"It's so different," Dedini said of the second poster. "I may try to steal some of these ideas in the future."

Grade three's winner was a picture of a witch with colorful green hair and a multicolored dress, drawn by Molly Koote. There was a sign in the middle of the picture pointing inward which read "Nice witch."

"It's stunning," Dedini said. "It would

TO HURRY WORK ON COAST HIGHWAY

A movement which has for its purpose the rapid building of the Coast Highway from Carmel to San Simeon was inaugurated at a meeting last Saturday at Del Monte. Business men of Carmel, Santa Cruz, Monterey and San Luis Obispo were present. Bonds to the amount of $1,500,000 have been voted to complete the highway which will form the most impressive link in the state highway, connecting San Francisco with southern California, and work upon the first unit which was let under contract some weeks ago will, within the next ten days, be started.

VOTE EARLY IS PLEA FOR NEXT TUESDAY'S ELECTION

Next Tuesday is the Big Day; the historic first Tuesday of November, when, as in every fourth year, the nation goes to the polls to elect a president and a host of lesser officials. Carmel has 1,526 citizens qualified to vote in the general election; 333 more than were registered four years ago, when Hoover carried the village by a margin of 134, the vote being: Hoover, 539; Roosevelt, 405.

An exceedingly close race is forecast here, with both Republican and Roosevelt clubs confidently predicting victory. Both sides have canvassed the vote carefully, and each expects to win by a small margin. The registration figures for this district were: Republican, 769; Democrats 698.

UNDERGROUND PARKING WILL SAVE CITY ATMOSPHERE CARMEL ARCHITECT CLAIMS

Carmel needs more than a parking plan, more than a mall and more than improved circulation of traffic. The village needs "re-humanizing" and, although it is now far ahead of most other towns and cities in what it offers the human being, it would fall far behind if it chooses the piece-meal measures of expediency rather than long-term planning.

These are the thoughts of Carmel architect Marcel Sedletzky, who says he believes and hopes he speaks for many. He speaks with the sympathetic attention of a Carmelite trying to put his own house in order.

With vivid description, he painted a swift vision of Carmel as it might be, perhaps as it must be: an attractive core of human-scale buildings accessible to pedestrians only and encompassing several streets, a ring of parking space on the periphery, and transition and residential zones beyond.

RESIDENTS TOUR THEIR FOREST

During the past weekend, approximately one hundred residents of Del Monte Forest joined their neighbors for guided walking tours through various regions of the Forest which are included in the new development plan. The printed plan was received in the homes of residents a few days earlier and the walking tours were designed to acquaint the people with the areas to be developed and those to be preserved in their natural state.

Presently there are 2,778 homes in Del Monte Forest. With the addition of the proposed 1,730 units, density will ultimately reach 4,508 units. this is exclusive of the privately owned lots in the Forest that are yet to be developed.

CV COMMUNITY POOL NEEDS $40,000 IN REPAIRS

The board of directors of the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center has embarked upon a $40,000 project to rehabilitate its 17-year-old swimming pool.

At the same time, the non-profit organization has sent out an appeal to Valley residents to make donations to help pay for the badly-needed work.

Robert ("Chuck") McKay, head of a special pool restoration committee, said the pool was closed in early August when it became obvious that numerous problems had developed with equipment.

"The board decided to either upgrade the pool or replace it," McKay explained. For that purpose, it allocated $23,000 which has been committed to a contractor for basic repairs. Over and above that, however, there were other deficiencies that needed repair.

Correction

LAST WEEK The Pine Cone reported incorrectly in a story on the Carmel Valley Master Plan subsequent EIR that the Williams property in Carmel Valley was destined for a hotel complex. Instead, the parcel of land is slated for a service center for the home building industry.

Both the Williams and Walters land, which is currently being used for farming, had been considered for deletion from the subsequent EIR to the Carmel Valley Master Plan along with land owned by the Lombardos which is being considered for a hotel complex.

The county planning commission referred the matter to the board of supervisors for clarification.

Frohman-CHS joint project

Performing arts high school may be in cards

By DAVID LELAND

FOR A song and dance the Carmel Unified School District this fall entered into a partnership with the Frohman Academy in what appears to be a unique and exciting blend of art and education.

In return for allowing the musical/theater school to house its administrative office at Carmelo School, the CUSD is not only receiving monthly rent but is also reaping the benefit of the academy's music teacher at Carmel High School and other district programs.

But that's not all, what may seem too good to be true may get even better soon, according to Mikel Pippi, Frohman Academy executive director.

The academy this week hired Richard Hilton, local theater expert and former Carmel High School teacher, to conduct a feasibility study to test the waters for Pippi's dream — a fine arts high school in Monterey County.

This would be a "school within a school," said Pippi, a veteran theater director. "This would establish a cornerstone for a performing arts high school."

Pippi said Frohman hopes to have the $20,000 feasibility study, which was financed by both the Packard Foundation and the Frohman Academy, completed by next summer.

With a little luck, the fine arts school could be operating within Carmel High School by January of 1988, Pippi said.

"This would be unique in the nation," he said referring not only to the school, but also the method of funding, which would come from both the private sector and public coffers.

"We see the district as a separate funding base," he said. "There are certain grants we can receive and the schools can't because they are public."

The goal of the "school within a school" would be to develop new talent and direct people towards Broadway, Pippi said.

"We would take them in, train them and give them their first job," he said.

Until the feasibility study has been completed, it remains unclear whether the school will provide general education in addition to fine arts curriculum or will only offer theater study.

Either way, Pippi said, he wants to establish a "feeder program" to either Cal Poly San Luis Obispo or University of California at Santa Cruz.

He added that, in any event, the first year of operation classes would be open only to junior and senior high school students. But soon after, classes would be available to all high school grades.

The initial idea for a fine arts school was presented by Pippi in December of 1985 to a group of state and local politicians, plus an impressive list of educators, at a meeting funded by the Packard Foundation.

At that meeting it became apparent that arts had become a large priority to public officials.

"We believe arts is one of our essentials to economic success in California," said Assemblyman Sam Farr. "Need I point out that New York City, for example, if you were to remove the arts from that city, it would die."

The rest of the meeting's members agreed and the seeds were sown for the innovative educational project.

•

BUT IN the meantime Pippi has not been idle, in fact, the CUSD has been offered a chance to experience fine arts classes as never before.

The Frohman Academy has been providing — free of charge to the CUSD — a fine arts curriculum to help supplement the general education classes.

"We believe the arts are very important aspect of a child's education," Pippi said. "Without the arts it is hard to produce a well-rounded child."

Here are the classes the Frohman Academy is providing Carmel's schools:

• A music class at Carmel High School. The academy introduced Dick Robins to CUSD administrators, who hired him; under the terms of its agreement with the school district, the Frohman Academy pays for one period of music instruction daily.

• A vocal chorale at the high school. Caterina Micieli, who sings with the Carmel Bach Festival each year, has begun the class with 10 students, but expects the number to rise to 40 by the time the chorale begins to travel within the region giving concerts at its schools.

• Daily dance classes in both Carmel Middle School and Carmel High School. These are incorporated into the physical education schedule and are mandatory.

• The academy has plans to begin an acting class at both the middle and high school in the near future.

• Will begin a program called The Other Side of the Fence at Carmel River School. This musical and dance project places 20 River School students and 20 handicapped students together to examine each others lives.

In addition to activities within the school district, the Frohman Academy has also begun planning classes at Carmelo School.

Soon, Pippi said, the school, which has been vacant for the past three years, will house a dance studio, an adult evening program and the academy's Young People's Musical Theater Camp, held each summer.

AT CARMEL Middle School dance classes are a mandatory part of the physical education program. Here instructor Laura Akard conducts a group of sixth-graders in the fine art of dance.

RECOGNIZE THIS Carmel landmark? If you do you qualify as a true Carmel oldtimer. It's the Pine Inn when Ocean Avenue was just a dirt road and the primary mode of transportation had four legs.

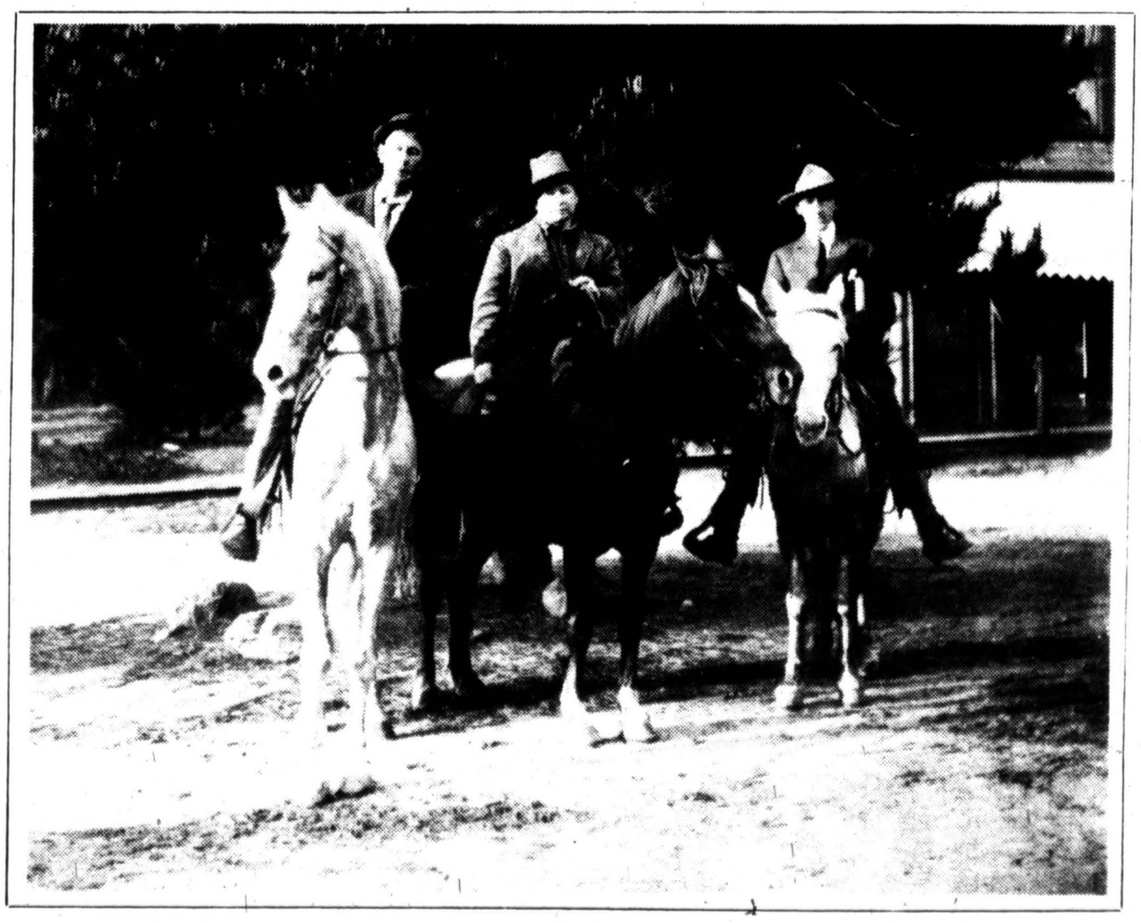

YES, CARMEL, they had ice cream in town even back then, here at the Curtis Lunch Room, which also served Budweiser beer and abalone steaks.

HUNDREDS OF Carmelites turned out Nov. 11, 1921 for the laying of the cornerstone for the memorial arch located at the intersection of Ocean and San Carlos, now a popular tourist landmark in the heart of downtown. The Carmel Garage is now Dick Bruhn's menswear store.

YES, WITH a few major changes (the bell tower for example) the All Saints Church on Monte Verde was transformed into Carmel's new city hall last year.

Eastwood donates $30,000 to help victims group

By DAVID LELAND

PUTTING HIS money where his beliefs are, Mayor Clint Eastwood this week donated $30,000 to the campaign aimed at ousting California Supreme Court Chief Justice Rose Bird.

The donation came after meeting with several victims of the court system, Eastwood said. One in particular involved hearing the mother of a slain girl tell how the state high court reversed the death sentence of her daughter's convicted killer.

The state Supreme Court has reversed all of the death penalty convictions that has been brought before it.

"This is a subject matter people don't want to face," Eastwood said. "I would challenge people who feel differently to come to one of these meetings."

Last month Eastwood attended a meeting in Monterey of Crime Victims for Court Reform, which has also organized a campaign against reconfirmation of justices Cruz Reynoso and Joseph Grodin, as well as Bird.

Crime Victims for Court Reform was established in 1984 and is composed of victims of crime and their families, plus law enforcement officials and civic leaders. The group claims that more than 15,000 citizens have endorsed or contributed to their efforts.

The meeting, which showed videotapes of victims telling their stories and speakers detailing inequalities in the justice system, especially the Bird court, rekindled a belief Eastwood said he has had for many years.

"I've always been interested in victims of violent crime," he said, "since the film Hang 'Em High." Eastwood said this film — a Western which portrayed a vicious vigilante group hanging the wrong man — was a statement against victims not having their rights met.

This motif was again brought out in Eastwood's classic detective film Dirty Harry, the story of a San Francisco policeman obsessed with seeking out criminals set free by technicalities in the justice system — and meting out his own style of punishment with a .44 Magnum.

"In Dirty Harry nobody else seemed to be concerned about the victim," Eastwood said. "Nobody wanted to upset the status quo.

"I believe strongly in the rights of the accused. I believe in the system," Eastwood continued. "But sometimes you can go too far."

CARMEL MAYOR Clint Eastwood congratulates Angel Garcia Jr. during a Crime Victims for Court Reform function in Monterey while Lee Chancellor, local chairman of the organization, looks on. Garcia, a correctional officer at Soledad Prison, was honored for heroism by the group for his capture of a knife-wielding mugger on the streets of Salinas. Eastwood recently donated $30,000 to the group, whose goal this year is to oust state Supreme Court justices Rose Bird, Cruz Reynoso and Joseph Grodin, who the group feels are violating the rights of victims by consistently overturning death penalty convictions. get your attention if you hung it up somewhere. It's so direct."

The winner in the fifth-grade, Michael Lande, showed a witch with red hair, who had foreboding words stenciled across the top of the picture which read: "Come to the Halloween Parade or sufer (sic)."

HOW IMPORTANT IS AN INDEPENDENT JUDICIARY?

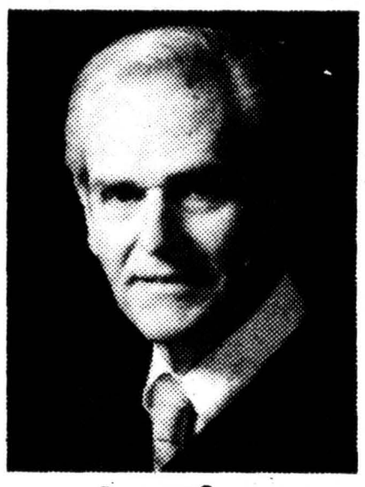

Current Chief Justice Bird and the late Chief Justice Gibson speaking together at the Monterey Fairgrounds in 1978

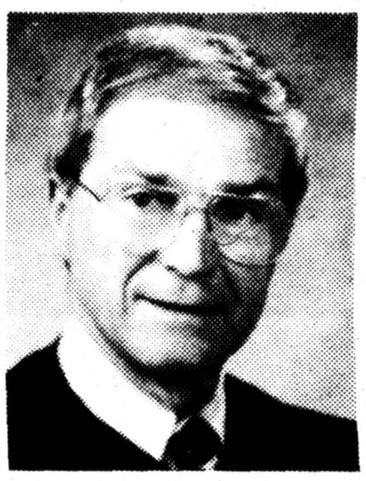

Justice Grodin

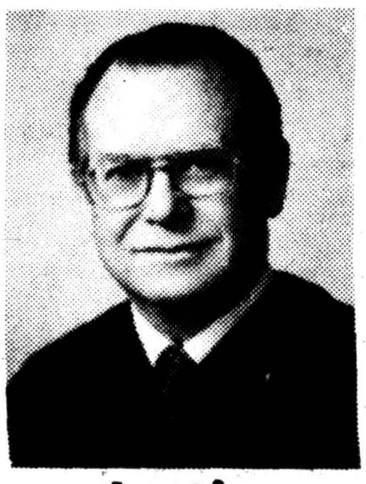

Justice Lucas

Justice Mosk

Justice Panelli

Justice Reynoso

The political advertisement below was printed in The Herald on November 5, 1978, two days prior to election day, The late Phil S. Gibson, Chief Justice of California 1940-1964, endorsed this statement and helped to draft its language.

California citizens voted to retain all Justices on the Retention Ballot in 1978, as they have done since 1934, when contested elections on a specific party ballot were abolished and the present system of uncontested, non-partisan confirmation elections was adopted.

We, the undersigned, endorse the 1978 statement as fully applicable to the Rention Election of 1986.

HOW IMPORTANT IS AN INDEPENDENT COURT SYSTEM?

The rights of each of us are secure only if every judge is free to reach a decision based on conscience and the law, free from political pressure.

These rights are endorsed by the unfair and misleading compaign to unseat Chief Justice Rose Elizabeth Bird and three Associate Justices of the California Supreme Court. Member of the judicial branch of government should not be immune from criticism, but those who criticize them have a responsibility to recognize the purpose of the confirmation vote and the special role of the courts to uphold the law and constitution.

Public confirmation provides one method for speedily removing from office those judges who are clearly incompetent or dishonest, but it was never intended as a means of punishing a judge for his or her opinion of the applicable law in a specific case. Unless a judge can be free of fear of political reprisal for his or her decisions, our system of justice will be serously crippled.

The current effort to deny confirmation of these Justices violates these standards and is an attempt to force judges to conform to the political judgements of partisan groups. It has gone beyond personal attacks on individuals to threaten the independence of all courts. It is doubly by their position from actively campaigning for confirmation or answering in kind.

It is, therefore, the duty of those who cherish the American heritage of constitutional democracy to defend the integrity of the judicial system. We believe the conduct, competency and legal knowledge of the Justices now before the electorate merit your support. We urge the confirmation of ROSE ELIZABETH BIRD as Chief Justice and...(her Associates).

BUSINESS BEAT

By Nancy Hills

Back again

OK, OK, I'm here.

Yes, for those of you whose weeks just aren't the same without a Business Beat, and have accosted me on the street asking where the column was last week, now you can relax. All has returned to normal. Last week, we simply ran out of room. Let's not discuss the week before.

By the way, just for those who are wondering if the picture on this column was my idea, the answer is a resounding "No." You should have seen them trying to get my photograph taken. I felt just like all the folk who have had to stand with fixed smiles while I fiddled with the camera. Most unpleasant experience. Any resemblance of this picture to persons living or dead is simply coincidental.

Eight-by-10 autographed glossies will be available upon request, of course. Just send your $100 in my name to the The Pine Cone.

RESIGNATIONS

Let's start out this week by catching up with the upshot of the note sent to some of the CBA board members which said Carmel Business Association Executive Manager Lee Chamberlin and Julia Felis were resigning.

Apparently, the board met, sorted things out and are happy to announce that both resignations have been "withdrawn."

Chamberlin told me after the note was delivered that she had no intention of resigning, so it doesn't come as too much of a surprise.

UP AGAINST THE WALL

It's just a name, folks, not a condition.

When I met Denise Amato, she wasn't against the wall but on the floor, working to get her framing shop and art gallery, called Up Against the Wall, ready to open by Nov. 1.

ONE OF two owners of Mail Boxes Etc., USA in The Crossroads, Jill Sleeper and her husband, Jim, have purchased the franchise rights for the private mail box company for Monterey and Santa Cruz counties. (Nancy Hills photo.)

Denise and her husband Steve are putting the spit and polish to the former Gallery de Tours, located on Lincoln between Ocean and Seventh. The space has been vacant for many months, and was filled by Earl Meyers of Herma Curtis Real Estate.

Matting and framing is the business' forte, Denise Amato said, but it also will be a gallery for Northwestern American art. Everything from new interpretations of traditional Indian pottery, strict interpretations, painting and sculpture.

The Carmel gallery will be one of three the Amatos own; two others are in Portland where they got their start. Denise said she plans to keep those open, even though they are moving to Carmel — primarily because California is where they always has wanted to be.

CHAPEAU CHATEAU

The Court of the Fountains has a new tenant — Geni Giles' millinery shop has replaced Antique Accessories in one of the two gazebos in the courtyard.

Giles explained her new shop, Chapeau Chateau Etc., carries established hat lines and women's clothing accessories — including Italian leather handbags, costume jewelry and belts

Additionally, Giles will custom design and make hats for any outfit or in any style that a chapeau fancier may want. Custom work is by appointment only, however. She's also doing special items for Halloween.

CROSSROADS INROADS

It's time to do a Crossroads update. Yes, things do change, whether I'm paying attention or not. Hard to believe, but it's true.

First, in The Crossroads management itself, there is a new public relations person.

"Sam" Stanley — Sam is the nickname she wants to go by — has taken over the duties of letting peninsula folk know what is going on at The Crossroads.

Stanley said she has 23 years of PR experience and has recently moved here from San Francisco. However, whatever she's got up her sleeve in the way of new and exciting promotions is not for me to say. Watch for them in the future.

In other goings-on, Chuntneys Gourmet Cafe owners Debby Corlew and Fuad Bahou are developing a seafood restaurant right next door to their cafe (an enterprise which appears to be a success). Scampi's is the name of the future addition to culinary delights in the area and will feature seafood in all forms, including pasta dishes and a few menu items with a Mideastern flair. Look for it to open around Jan 1. Originally they had hoped to open this month, but life does have its ups and downs.

Another new eating place in the process of development is a sushi bar in the back of James and June Tajiri's shop Kogetsu. More details when and if it becomes a set project.

Diana Kuwabara is looking into buying Cafe Central, owned by Herb and Tara Evans. If the sale goes through, there might be some changes there.

COSMETIC DENTISTRY

Modern dentistry can do wonderful things for unsightly smiles.

Discolored, stained, chipped, and missing teeth cause many people to never smile and lose self-confidence.

Non-removable teeth can improve your appearance, speech, and provide self-confidence.

Information on improving your smile can be received by calling...

But in the meantime, while all those changes are still in the works, the biggest new addition to The Crossroads is:

MAIL BOXES ETC., USA

Post office boxes aren't anything new to this area, but this idea is a little different.

Jill and Jim Sleeper have purchased the Mail Boxes Etc., USA franchise rights for Monterey and Santa Cruz counties, and their pilot store is in The Crossroads. Mail Boxes Etc. is a six-year-old company that began in San Diego, Jill said. The Sleepers owned one of the stores in Huntington Beach in Southern California.

If you aren't familar with this concept, it involves private mail boxes that anyone can rent (for a minimum of three months) and get several services in addition.

Mail Boxes Etc. has an address where your mail is delivered — your mailbox is called a suite — so instead of a post office box address, Jill explained, your mail is addressed to 225 Crossroads and a "suite" rather than a post office box.

The "shop," as Sleeper calls it, has 24-hour access to the boxes, strict confidentiality, and will provide copying (also with 24-hour access for boxholders,) secretarial and telephone message services.

Sleeper said it will receive and ship UPS, have all U.S. Post Office services and overnight delivery through Emery Worldwide, UPS and the post office.

They also have electronic mail services for telegrams, cablegrams, Mailgram messages, money orders, TELEX services, and, according to the Sleepers, worldwide facsimile transmission services.

Lest local Postmaster Jack Holt have concern about this new development in his bailiwick, Jim explains that, "Although we have been dubbed 'the post office alternative,' our stores actually pose little threat to the United States Postal System. We're in the business of saving people time and legwork."

The services have a few refinements that sound rather nice. You can call and get your mail forwarded and the shop will hold mail indefinitely.

The Crossroads store is just one of outlets the Sleepers are planning. As owners of the franchise rights in this area, they are selling other store franchises throughout the two counties. Right now, they already are helping to set up one in Pacific Grove by Christmas and one in Capitola.

"SAM" STANLEY has moved down from San Francisco to tackle The Crossroads shoping center's public relations, advertising and marketing duties. (Mac McDonald photo.)

SHIRLEY SCHMELTZ has been named the commercial lines manager for Independent Insurance Agents and Brokers of the Monterey Peninsula.

MEDICAL CARE

Dr. Paul Tocchet, owner and medical director for Immediate Medical Care offices on the peninsula, is looking into opening one here in Carmel. One space he is thinking of taking over is the former Lilli's dress shop on the corner of Monte Verde and Seventh, another location that has been empty for quite sometime. Right now, water use is one of the items that has slowed plans for the new office.

The doctors' offices, explained General Manager Frank Gibson, accept people without appointment, and are open seven days a week with hours from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. They're a doctor's office, however, not a replacement for a hospital emergency room.

As mentioned above, the business license has been applied for, but things are on hold because of the water use moratorium.

SCHMELTZ — COMMERCIAL LINES BROKER

Carmel Insurance Agency, Inc. has announced the appointment of Shirley A. Schmeltz as commercial lines manager for the Carmel-based firm. Schmeltz, according to Independent Insurance, is a state licensed insurance broker, with 16 years experience in the industry, and previously worked for the Kilpatrick Insurance Agency and as the underwriting supervisor for Design Professionals Insurance Co. in Monterey.

Her new managerial duties will include researching available insurance coverages and helping clients select the right companies for their commercial insurance needs.

Shirley and her husband Bob, who owns Jim's Cabinet Shop in Seaside, live in Corral de Tierra. They consider bicycling their favorite pastime, sometimes travelling more than 150 miles a weekend, exploring the beauty of Central California.

Hidden Valley's October Splendor

OCTOBER SPLENDOR — a fashion show and tea dance — was presented Sunday afternoon by Friends of Hidden Valley with second vice president Bebe Moothart putting the event together.

Fashions by Gerry's and Charmak and Chandler covered all holiday occasions from sporty to formal glamor. Holiday evenings, according to commentator Gerry Verga, will include reds, of course, liquid coppers and sparkles on sophisticated blacks are still in. Her surprise of the evening was a showing of furs which created a definite buzz.

The runway held a sheltering ceiling of dangling pine and cedar branches with tall faux candlebras holding pumpkins, candles, mums and fall leaves to brighten each end. Designer Lynda Thornton carried this fall motif over for the table centers.

All of the models except a few were Hidden Valley volunteers. Those extending their volunteerism to the runway were Guilio de Petra, Anne McGowan, Peterson Conway, Perry Moothart, Jack Stocking and Sue Zuber, all from Carmel. From Carmel Valley were Thelma Lee, Adrienne Meckel, R.T. Nimmons, Shirley Nimmons, Beverly Paik, Meryl Robertson, and at the piano Malcolm Seagrave, composer-in-residence. Jane Strauch, former Friends president, and Gigi Clausen came from Pacific Grove.

A drawing was held at the end of the showing and winning gift certificates from Charmak and Chandler and Gerry's were Eugene Erner, Mary White and Jim Romain.

Mary Lou Bernhardt, head of the refreshment committee, supplied sandwiches, homebaked cookies, champagne, and punch to energize for high-stepping to the lively tea dance music of Robert Phillips and Edward Graham.

GATEWAY CENTER AWARDS RECEPTION

On all counts the first Annual Awards Reception given by Gateway Center was a huge success. This special event to recognize outstanding contributions to the center by friends, benefactors, and employees was held Friday in Carmel Mission Ranch Barn.

Among those were Pacific Grove Mayor Florus Williams, Richard Murnigham (United Way), Assemblyman Sam Farr and State Sen. Henry Mello.

Ten awards were presented during a brief ceremony. Nick Lombardo, Rancho Canada, received the Benefactor's Award and Dr. Kevin Landon, the Service Provider Award. Park department joins fight on crime

October is National Crime Prevention Month and the California Department of Parks and Recreation has joined the fight to take a bite out of crime.

A brochure with crime prevention and public safety tips has been designed especially for visitors to California State Parks. Free copies may be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed, 9½" x 4½" envelope to: Doheny State Beach Interpretive Association, 25300 Dana Point Harbor Drive, Dana Point, CA 92672.

Developed by State Park Rangers Jerrold Spansail and Susan Ross, the booklet includes such tips as:

- When you park your vehicle in a remote area, you should take all your valuables with you. If that is not possible, make sure they are secured in the trunk, or at least out of sight.
- Note location of telephones and have emergency phone numbers handy.
- Meet with your neighbors and agree to watch each others' campsites and personal belongings.

Some California state parks are developing Campground Watch Programs similar to the Neighborhood Watch Programs found in many communities.

For more information about this program, contact: Pendleton Coast District, 3030 Avenue del Presidente, San Clemente, CA 92672.

Non-smokers guide to area restaurants available free

Clean air in restaurants is becoming the rule rather than the exception in California as the evidence mounts against passive, or second-hand smoke.

If smoking in restaurants continues to bother you, as it does many people, the American Lung Association offers inoffensive ways to let the restaurant industry know that second-hand smoke is not a proper side-dish to serve with meals.

The association has available a Guide to Restaurants with Non-smoking Sections for both Monterey and Santa Cruz County residents which lists those "clean air" restaurants and what proportion of the restaurant is designated for non-smokers.

Also available from the lung association is a sheet of stickers on which two messages are printed — one thanking the restaurant for providing a non-smoking section and another asking that a section be provided.

To obtain the guide and stickers, call the American Lung Association at 757-5864, or write to 140 Central Ave., Salinas, CA. 93901.

Taste-tempting affair

KAZU, THE community-supported radio station based in Pacific Grove, is going upscale Nov. 8.

The evening KAZU will present "A Tasty Affair" an elegant wine and food tasting event at the Highlands Inn to benefit the station, which depends on community support for almost all of its budget.

There are wine tasting events and there are Wine Tasting events. The evening begins at 5 p.m. in the Fireside Room with wine tastings from 22 of California's finest wineries, culinary treats from eight local food shops and catering companies and even beverages from two non-alcoholic beverage companies.

But it doesn't end there. After the tastings jazz fusion band Expose will be playing music to dance to. The Highlands Inn has also graciously allowed revelers to make use of their own cocktail lounge for the remainder of the evening.

Wineries represented include the cream of the crop of California vintners: Acacia, Boonie Doon, Bouchaine, Chalone, Chimney Rock, Dry Creek, Durney, Far Niente, Gloria Ferrer, William Hill, Jekel, Jordan, Morgan, Raymond, Ridge, Charles Shaw, Silver Oak, Sonoma-Cutrer, Smith and Hook, Sterling, and William Wheeler.

Catering companies and food shops include: Carmel Wine and Cheese Co., Creme de la Creme, Dudley's, Michael's Catering, Monterey Baking Co., Sushi to Go, Sweet Earth and Co., and the Lodge at Pebble Beach.

Non-alcoholic drinks will be served by Hillside Coffee Co. and Gizdich Ranch.

Tickets are available in advance only, and they are going fast. Tickets are $25 each or $40 per couple and are available at Center Stage Ticketing at 649-5561. There will be only 500 sold.

So if your taste buds crave more than the vin ordinaire of commercial radio, A Tasty Affair will be the place to be Nov. 8.

CARMEL YOUTH CENTER

By Jeff Bell

Boogie Man birthday

TOMMORROW NIGHT the Carmel Youth Center comes alive! Zombies walk, creatures talk, aliens play video. Mr. Frank N. Stein dances the mash with Miss Vamp Ire and Hotbloods chill out to the howling sounds of Kool Inc.

On the same day as the City of Carmel's 70th birthday celebration, The Carmel Youth Center is sponsoring a FREE Halloween Party/Dance! This event is for sixth-, seventh- and eighth-grade students. This event is open to all middle schools in the Carmel Unified School District. It starts at 7:30 p.m. and ends at 9:30. Costumes are optional, however prizes for costumed people will be given. Swami Bell will be telling the future as well. The dance will be chaparoned by adult volunteers from the center's board of directors and volunteer members from other school and civic groups.

(Note — a retraction of last week's statements concerning the observing of CMS rules and CMS Parent/Faculty Club chaperone is in order. There is no association with the CMS or CMS Parent/Faculty Club with this event. It was my only intention to set standards as high as by those above for events here at the CYC.)

I hope you got the chance to see the Carmel High Homecoming Day Parade last Friday. Twenty vehicles rambled through town at slow speed. The route was down Ocean Avenue and back to the high school. The Carmel High School Band played while the cheerleaders and the varsity football team waved from fire trucks! The meter maids handled traffic while the parade went through town. It was great to see everyone take a little time out for the schools.

On behalf of everyone in the parade I want to thank the whole town for being there. Special thanks to the Carmel Police Department, The Carmel Fire Department, and the City of Carmel for making it possible.

Free pizza. Free Coke. — All you have to do is work for yourself! That could have been last Sunday's motto when the Carmel Youth Council came in to clean up. Forty volunteers came in to bust dust. After wrestling out rusty stuff and cleaning cobwebs the council took a lunch break with Dominos pizza and soft drinks. Remember our hotline number is 624-1444, adult coordinator Tom Faia.

Okudo Ruy Jujitsu is a traditional Japanese martial art that is offered in weekly classes at the CYC. Sensei Carl Quigg has just opened registration. Cost is $20 per month. The class meets every Tuesday and Thursday from 7-8 p.m. Hurry to sign up as class size is limited. Nov. 3 is Raider Nighte so bring your party hat for a Raider Birthday party. Burgers for 75 cents, Cokes for 25 cents. Such a Deal. We still serve the best hot dog on the planet.

Trivia question of the week: What was the name of Dale Evan's horse? Until next week, Adios.

Elect Don Bolles. . . for a balanced court.

Maturity, experience, a broad knowledge of the law and common sense are the hallmarks of a good judge:

- Army Infantry Officer and Vietnam combat veteran.
- Graduate of the University of San Diego School of Law with honors.
- Legal intern in the U.S. Attorney's Office.
- An attorney for 15 years.
- Prosecutor for the Monterey County District Attorney for 7 years.
- Endorsed by retiring Judge Howard Hudson.
- Endorsed by The Herald, Salinas Californian and the Casey Newspapers.
- Overwhelming choice in the Monterey County Bar Association poll.(May 1986)
- Widower, father of two sons.
- A balanced knowledge of both criminal and civil law.

Loopholes in the Law:

Loopholes in the law that allow criminals to go free are undermining peoples faith in our judicial system. As a judge, my thorough knowledge of legal technicalities will prevent convictions from being overturned due to procedural errors.

What The Casey Papers say:

"Our reasons for supporting Don Bolles can be summed up in one word commitment.

That means commitment to justice and commitment to Southern Monterey County, two traits essential to the continued well-being of the court that serves residents from Gonzales to the South County line.

He brings to his candidacy the best qualifications for the job. He's had experience in criminal law as both a prosecuting and defense attorney and is thus keenly aware of the rights of victims and the accused."

What The Herald says:

"The Herald believes that the southern portion of our large county deserves to keep a Municipal Court, and that Don Bolles is the best-qualified person to serve there.

He has a blend of civil and criminal law experience, and his election is likely to ensure the continuation of a South County court."

What The Salinas Californian says:

"We favor Bolles because of his combination of experience, both in his legal practice and his military career, and his temperament, which we believe is fair-minded and thoughtful . . . we think Bolles would display both common sense and compassion on the bench."

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Older people who follow a diet containing green and yellow vegetables seem to have lower risk of cancer. That's the conclusion of a five-year study carried on by medical researchers from Boston and Harvard Universities and the Boston VA Geriatric Center. Their report showed that the risk of death from cancer among 1,271 elderly subjects dropped as their intake of vegetables increased.

Eugene Ormandy conducted the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra for more than 44 years and was the orchestra's conductor laureate right up until his death last year at age 85.

Remember When? 1946 — Can you recall what songs were the biggest hits that year? Among the most popular were "The Gypsy," "They Say It's Wonderful," "Doing What Comes Naturally," "I Got The Sun In The Morning," "To Each His Own," "Aren't You Glad You're You," "Ole Buttermilk Sky" and "Shoo-Fly Pie And Apple Pan Dowdy."

FUNERAL SERVICES and burial, with a full police honor guard, were held at El Carmelo Cemetery Oct. 27 for retired longtime Carmel police officer Edward P. Fischer, who died Oct. 23. He was 59.

Fischer, twin brother of Carmel City Councilman and former Carmel assistant police chief Francis P. "Bob" Fischer, was a resident of Carmel for 45 years, joined the Carmel Police Department in 1958 and was a Carmel police officer for 25 years, retiring as a sergeant in 1983. He was born Dec. 19, 1926 in San Francisco.

Fischer, known as Ed or Eddie, patrolled the streets and beaches of Carmel — for several years on his trademark three-wheeled motorcycle — and sometimes with his brother Bob, who retired as assistant police chief in 1985.

He was a graduate of the 100th session of the FBI National Academy and won several awards during his tenure with the Carmel Police Department. He was honored by the city of Carmel in 1964 for outstanding bravery in apprehending an armed robber at Harrison Memorial Library.

Bob Fischer had this to say about his brother's early days with the force in a 1983 interview in The Pine Cone:

"Before we had our traffic control officers, Ed handled all the parking details from a three-wheeler. For that six or seven years he was one of our best public relations men, doing a job no one else wanted."

"I liked being out-of-doors and I got along well with people," Ed explained at the time.

He added that the most pleasurable aspect of his work with the police department was in helping people.

"Helping young people to get their lives straightened out was most satisfying," he said. "I am particularly proud of a letter I received from a colonel in the Army, thanking me for helping his son. That makes you feel good inside."

"Ed was part of Old Carmel," said Bob on Tuesday. "He mingled with the kids, knew and loved the kids, and loved to talk to people. He was very PR (public relations) -oriented. He got out of the (patrol) cars and walked the streets, something I've been trying to advocate lately. He had a lot of friends."

One of his favorite activities was fishing, an interest he shared with his brother Bob.

"When he retired he bought a camper and would go fishing to Lake San Antonio or Lake Tahoe," said Bob. "He never hunted, though, he didn't like guns. But fishing was his joy, that and his son Michael."

Ed Fischer had to retire from the force because of a deteriorating hearing condition; Bob himself had to break the news to him. "I called him into my office and said 'Ed, you've gotta pull the pin.' That was tough."

"In my mind Ed was a brave, heroic and compassionate man...but I'm his brother," Bob chuckled gently. "It's a big loss to me."

Fischer attended Pacific Grove schools, graduated from Pacific Grove High School and attended Monterey Peninsula College and California State University San Jose.

He is survived, in addition to his brother, by a son, Michael of Salmon, Idaho; a stepmother, Thelma Fischer of Lincoln; a half brother, Peter Fischer of Lincoln; a half sister, Thelma Patterson of Nairobi, Kenya; and three nieces, all of Carmel.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the Monterey County SPCA.

WEEKLY GREETING

Faithfulness is thine and reverence is thine; who then can rob thee of these things? Who can hinder thee to use them, if not thyself ? — Epictetus.

The Local Election

With but few exceptions, the citizens of Carmel, among them many who were opposed to incorporation, are satisfied with the results of the election.

A few irreconcilables there be who are predicting all sorts of dire disaster to the community as a result of incorporation, but in the main, the desire is to see the plan worked out.

By word of mouth and by letters received the Pine Cone is enabled to present various suggestions of property-owners as to what might be done at once.

The City Trustees, no doubt, will be obliged, in the beginning at least, to draw a sharp line between the new city's needs and individuals' wants.

Here are the suggestions:

Remove unsightly shacks and out bouses.

Repair the drinking trough on Ocean avenue.

Order repair of unsafe sidewalks.

Erect street and points of interest signs.

Impose a dog tax.

Establish a speed limit for automobiles.

And there are others.

Felicitation

The Monterey Cypress says:

"Carmel-by-the-Sea will soon be a city of the sixth class.

"The voters of the art and literary community decided Thursday to emerge from their dormancy, and cast an overwhelming vote in favor of incorporating.

"The Cypress believes that the people of Carmel-by-the-Sea acted wisely. For it has been demonstrated that steady municipal improvement is best accelerated by municipal government.

"Best wishes to the latest addition to progressive California cities and to the officers in whose charge the destinies of the community have been placed."

WE THANK YOU.

From wooden heels to wooden soles is only a step, and, after all, what is there to fear if the scarcity of leather does threaten us with a return to the sabot. Have we forgotten the winsome Chopinette in Planquet's comic opera, "Paul Jones," and her little song:

Ladies who'd fascinate a swain,
Leave silk and satin train—
The gentleman's sure to amorous grow
If you to him your sabots show.
And Oh! Oh! Oh!
Oh! Oh! Oh!
Just look at my sabots.

Or something like that. A quarter of a century is apt to play pranks with both the memory and song of sabots.—Chronicle.

Correct Negro Dialect

It is really amazing that so little good Negro dialect has been written Many people who attempt to write it do not understand that it differs in various southern states. The Negro dialect of Virginia is unlike the Negro dialect of Mississippi, and the Negro dialect of Mississippi differs from the Negro dialect of Georgia.

A phrase frequently misused by those unfamiliar with Negro dialect is "you all." Indeed this phrase, which is used by well-educated people in the South, is given a place nowadays in nearly every southern anecdote told or written on the other side of the Mason and Dixon line. The most illiterate Negro in the South never used "you all" in referring to one person, but northern writers and story tellers almost invariably use it that way.

Another thing that writers of Negro dialect should take into consideration is that the dialect of the Negro of today differs somewhat from the dialect of the Negro of before the war, because nearly every Negro of today who is old enough has attended school, and of course the teaching they have received has had its effect on their everyday language.—Exchange.

Origin of "The Players"

"An incident of considerable interest that comes across the path of one's observation while at Bar Harbor is the fact that this is the place where Edwin Booth, while on a visit along the west coast, called together that well known group of his friends, and organized the club which his fortune founded and with which his name will be ever perpetuated," says Laurance Hutton.

"Booth had long desired to do something in a tangible and enduring way for the good of his profession; and various schemes were fully discussed during the fortnight's cruse of the steam yacht Oneida, in the summer of 1886. The party consisted of Commodore E. E. Benedict, the owner of the yacht, T. B. Aldrich, Lawrence Barrett, William Bispham, Booth and myself. Booth's first idea was to found and endow some sort of an actors' home with sleeping rooms, writing rooms, and a restaurant and the like.

"The notion of a club for actors was the broached. Mr. Aldrich, with a peculiarly happy inspiration, proposed the name of the Players, and the general plan of organization was gradually outlined."

Suttle enters second season with plans, praise

By ANNE PAPINEAU

CLARK E. SUTTLE, immersed in his second season as music director and conductor of the Monterey County Symphony, is already mapping out the repertoire for 1987-88.

At times his job resembles that of a master chef planning a banquet.

"Putting a season together is a real undertaking," Suttle explained. "You have to keep watching for conflicts, hall availability, selection of guest artists. In terms of the season itself, it must represent a balance between all the various musical styles, the old and the new, the familiar and unfamiliar. And within that context, you must put together a cohesive program. Sometimes that's a difficult proposition, going as far as what key the concerts are in. It's like eating a meal. You don't want an appetizer that is overwhelming, or pasta for all the courses."

Controversy clouded Suttle's appointment to the conductor's post last year. The approaching retirement of Maestro Haymo Taeuber required the Monterey County Symphony Board of Directors to search for a successor. Suttle, then associate conductor of the Phoenix Symphony Orchestra, was one of eight candidates who actually guest-conducted the Monterey County Symphony orchestra over a two-year interview period.

'Artistically it would be hard to move from Monterey County. The orchestra is of a caliber that I'd have to be pretty choosy where I'd go next. I have a great deal of respect for this ensemble.'

The board of directors awarded the job to Suttle, but a majority of orchestra members supported a local candidate, Oleg Kovalenko. Many of these musicians went on to form the Monterey Bay Symphony, which began its second season in October as a chamber music group. Kovalenko resigned from the Monterey Bay Symphony in July.

With the loss of many first-chair musicians to the new orchestra, the Monterey County Symphony auditioned players from Santa Cruz, San Jose, Oakland and the San Francisco Bay Area.

Suttle voiced satisfaction with this complement of musicians, many of whom returned for a second season under his baton. He described his task as "not to dictate, but to guide. We're all comrades in arms, as it were. If there's a problem, they will implement answers if I alert them."

"Last year all this felt brand new. Now we're beginning to make a much more cohesive statement as a music-making ensemble," he said. "Last season we'd never played together as an ensemble. After six months or so you become part of the group and its consciousness. Individually the musicians are all very brilliant players, but to play together requires different compromises from different players.

"In the string section, for example, what we talked about last year has carried over — placement of the bow, intonation. Some people like to play on the high side of pitch — their stand partner on the low side. They have to reach a compromise. These are things we're now doing very well."

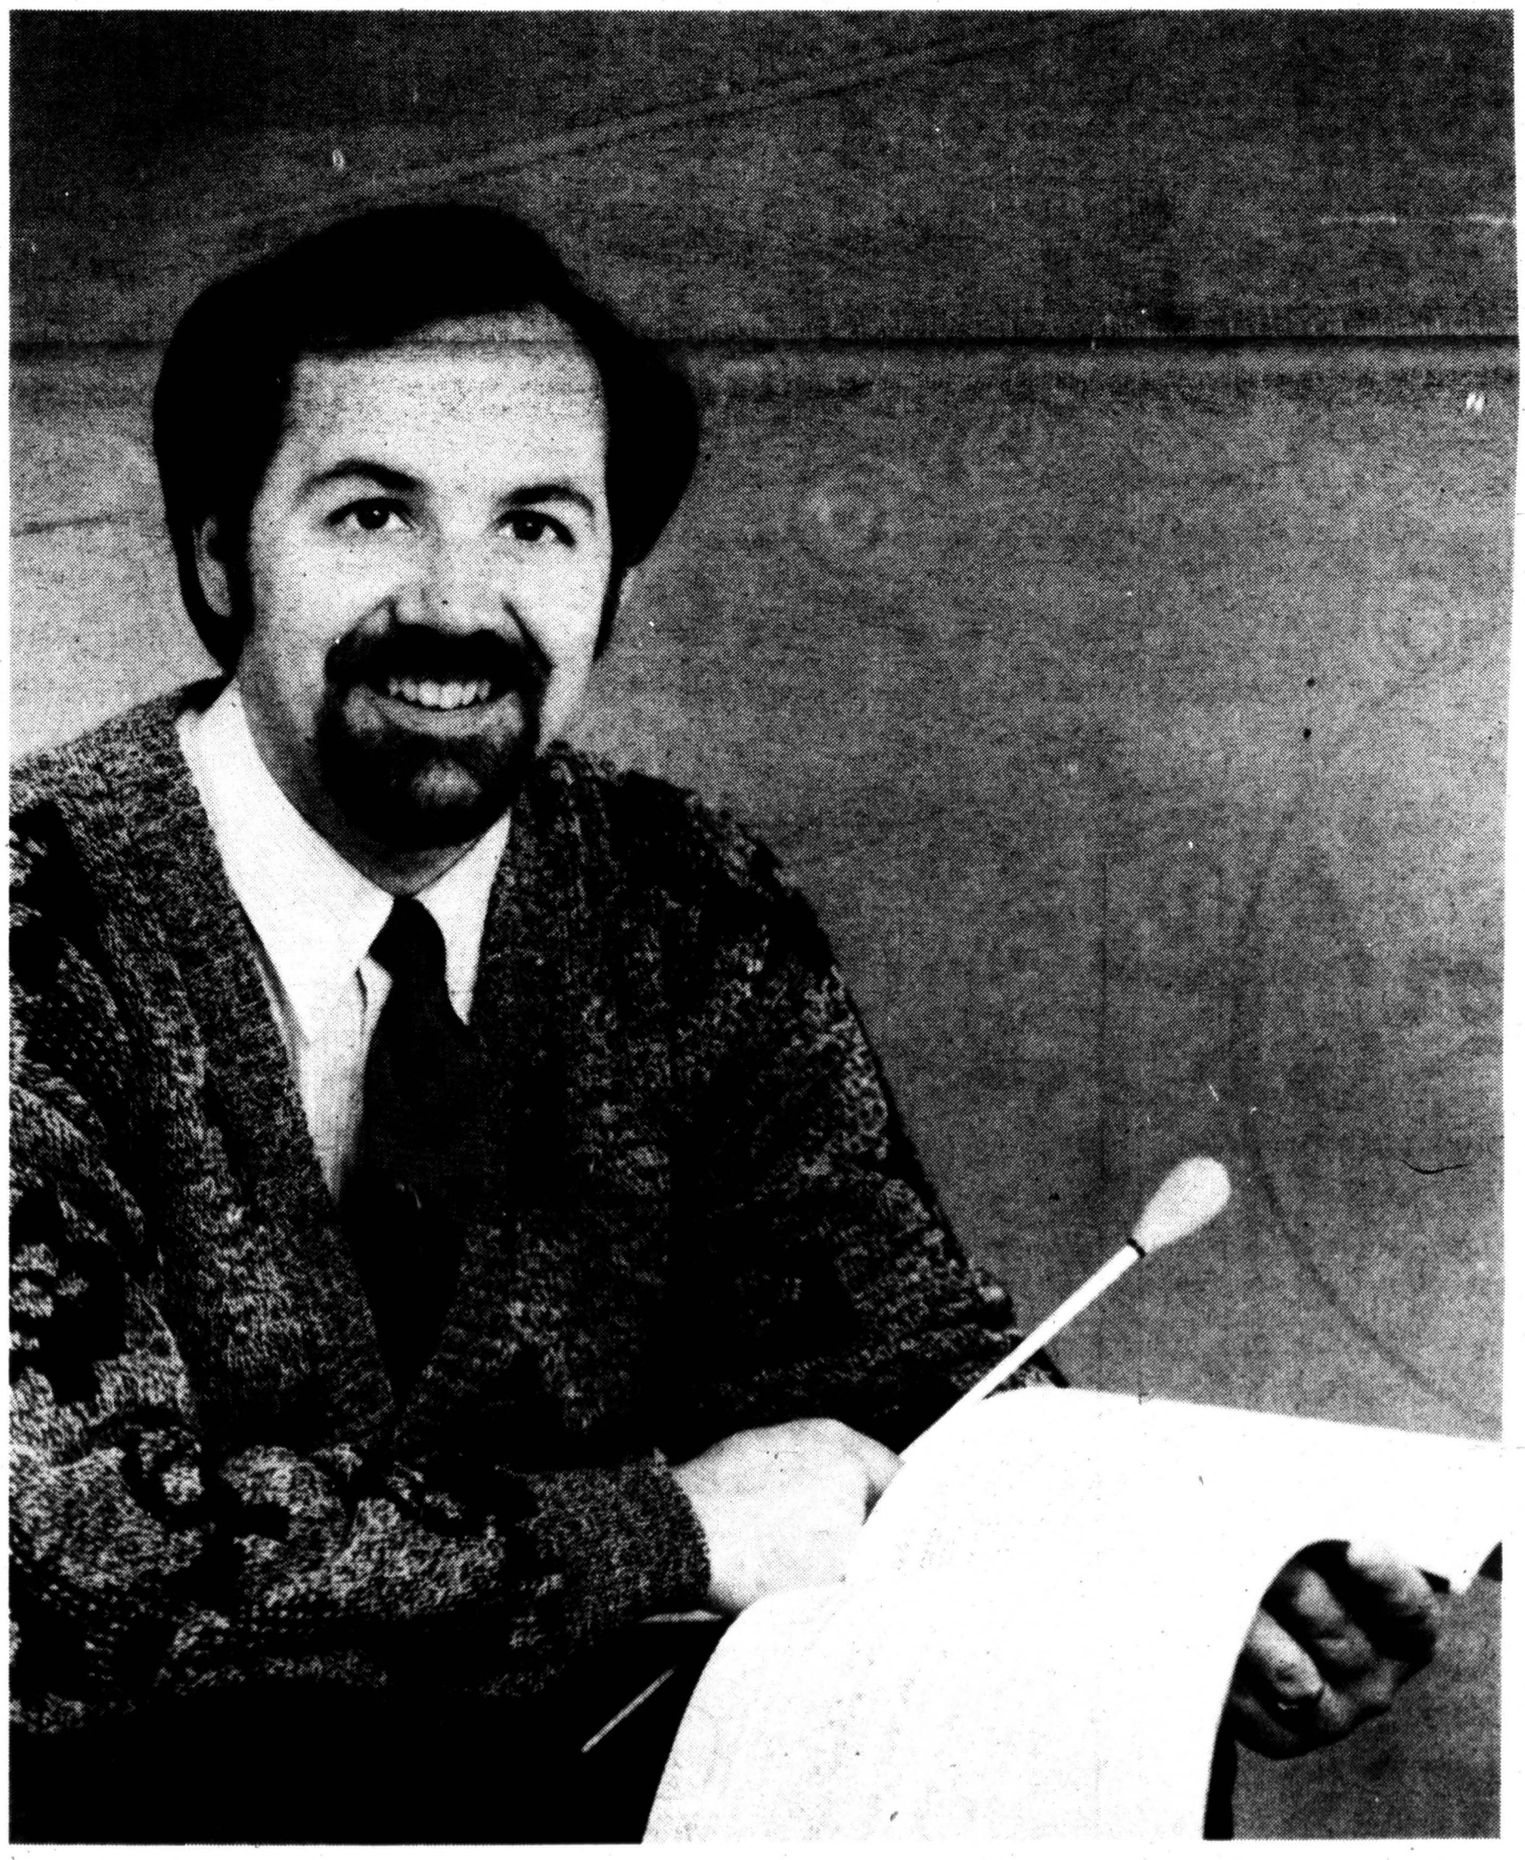

Suttle, an award-winning double bass player who has appeared at Carnegie Hall and even stepped in to perform with jazz ensembles, voiced enthusiasm for his role.

"Any music director's job is laden with responsibility — the responsibility of forming the orchestra, rehearsing the music and serving as a figurehead for the organization. I enjoy it. But more than that I enjoy making the music with this orchestra."

The current, six-concert Monterey County Symphony season includes an all-Beethoven concert in March, a December performance of Handel's "Messiah" with vocals provided by I Cantori Di Carmel, and a benefit pops concert in April featuring trumpeter Doc Severinsen.

"I met Doc in Buffalo when we played a pops concert there," explained Suttle, who was formerly associate conductor of the Buffalo Symphony. "We got to really know each other in Phoenix where he is principal pops conductor of the Phoenix Symphony."

The pops concert, to be presented April 25 at Sherwood Hall in Salinas, is representative of efforts by the county symphony to reach more listeners.

CLARK E. SUTTLE has entered his second season as music director and conductor of the 41-year-old Monterey County Symphony. Suttle said he hopes to bring more American and contemporary works to the county symphony repertoire. He also voices support for youth outreach programs and a benefit pops concert to be presented next spring at Sherwood Hall, Salinas.

ARTS & LEISURE

"We're trying to get people to come listen to a symphony orchestra who might think of it as an intimidating entity, very intellectual, very formal, although it's not necessarily so," Suttle noted. "We like to provide this service for various tastes. We'd like people to think of us as 'their orchestra.' We reached a new plateau and we're reaching for higher ground now. We need the support of the community. We want them to know we are here for them."

According to Suttle, the American Symphony Orchestra League (ASOL) maintains a five-classification rating of orchestras. Artist merit, budget, community service and other qualities provide the basis for ratings. The Monterey County Symphony is rated in the second highest category: professional metropolitan.

"In the metropolitan world we are considered one of the best,' he added. "Monterey County can take pride in what it has."

Suttle travelled to Europe this summer with his wife, Pia, whom he married last November. He also guest-conducted the Savannah (Georgia) Symphony this year. His travels offer a studied perspective on the state of symphony orchestras both here and abroad.

"There are many American orchestras troubled by serious deficit problems. I don't think that bodes the demise of the symphony orchestra by any stretch of the imagination," Suttle said. "I think a lot of the problem stems from a lack of education into how a symphony orchestra is funded and its importance in a community. The European scene in general reflects higher ticket prices and greater state funding, sort of built-in success. Here tickets raise just 20 to 25 percent of the budget. The rest of it is made up in contributions, both corporate, private and grants. Immediately you can see a built-in problem."

Adding to this inherent challenge to local orchestras, he maintained, are recorded performances of the classics. The conductor is quick to explain his appreciation of a live, spontaneous concert.

'To have a person like Beethoven amongst us — he left us a legacy, a heritage which is not only our duty to protect and sustain — it's also our duty to enjoy it.'

Suttle observed, "You record a piece, you go back and record a flawed part over. The engineer compensates for defects. You can put something on a disc that sounds very, very good, as close to perfection as you can get. The audience hears an orchestra which is costing between $13 and $17 million a year to run, and sometimes even those orchestras don't sound so well. I think the recording industry has a lot to offer music. They record great performances and create a library.

"But many things that work live do not work in a recorded performance. For example, in a live performance you create a mood, a feeling. We call it spontaneity. You plan interpretations and try to follow them, but sometimes the 'spirit' moves you. With a recording you can't take these kind of chances. That performance must 'wear' for a long time. Many famous artists don't like to do recordings. They feel there are three elements to a concert — the composer, the performer and the audience.

"The perspective of listening to recorded music clouds listening to live music. You become conditioned and m respond negatively simply because the music sounds different."

Suttle received both his bachelor of music degree in double bass and master of music in conducting from the University of Michigan. As a double bass player, he received the bronze medal at the International Performance Competition in Geneva, Switzerland; third prize in the Baltimore Conducting Competition and first prize in the Zeronian String Competition.

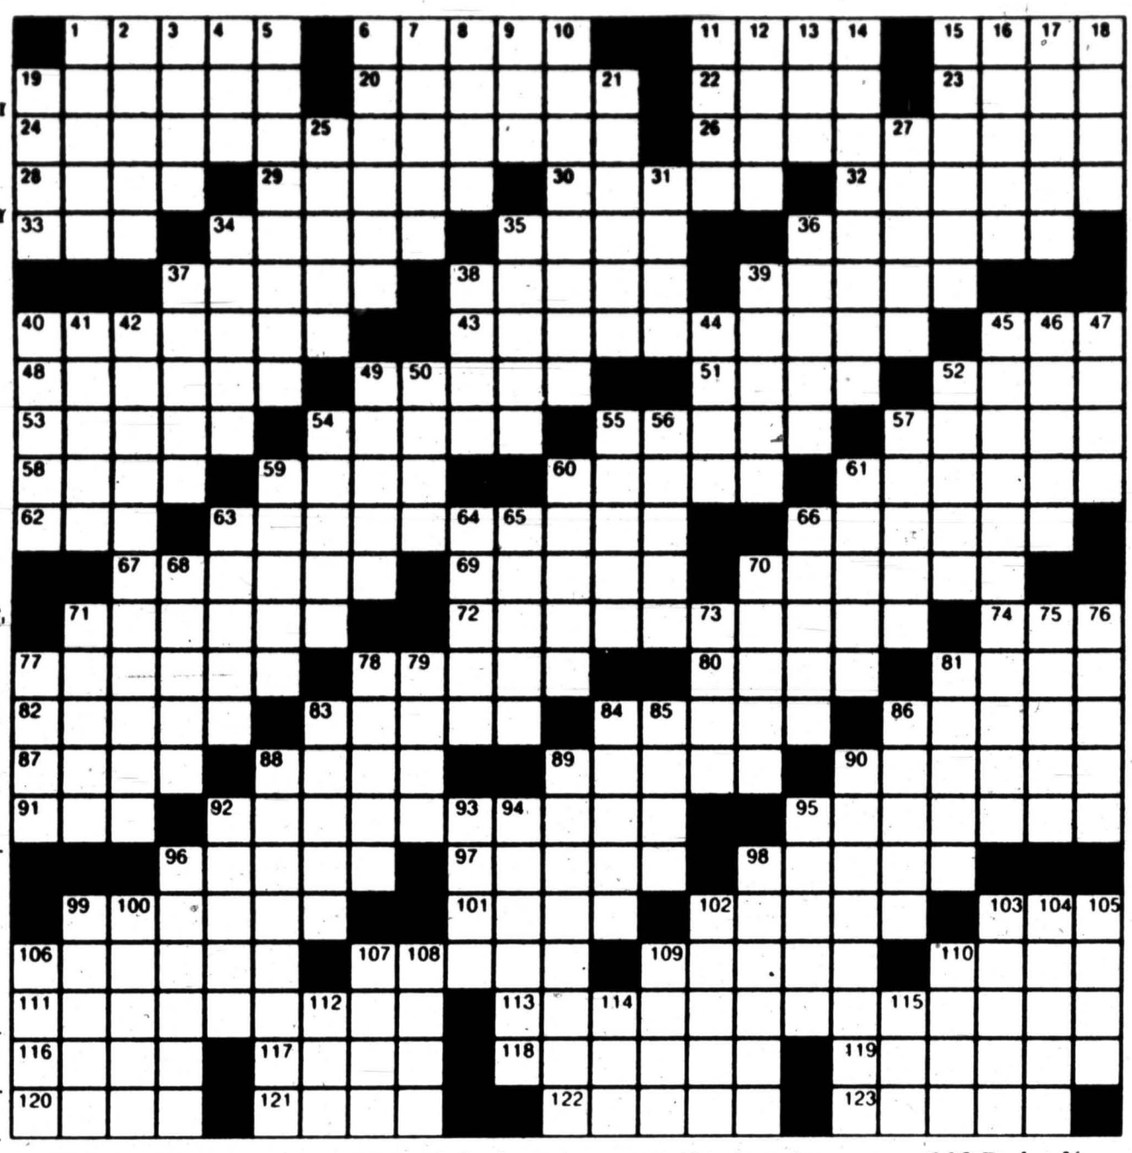

His conducting mentor was Max Rudolf, music director of Early brick house restoration support sought

Renovation of California's first brick house in Monterey is underway. Built in 1847 by Gallant Duncan Dickenson, the house was later the home of Captain John Pope Davenport.

The Junior League of Monterey County is sponsoring a fund-raising drive to save the building. Both public and private sources have provided much of the funds for the project and there is now a drive underway for additional support from the community.

To contribute or to obtain additional information, anyone interested is invited to contact: First Brick House, 391 Decatur St., Monterey, CA 93940.

Checks should be made payable to the Junior League of Monterey County — First Brick House Fund.

ART NOTES

By Sam Colburn

This island Carmel

THE POSITION of Carmel in the art world is curious. There is no doubt, in my mind, that it is an island. This does not mean that there are not fine artists here, but movements or schools of art do not start, nor are they sustained, in small communities. I would postulate a School of Carmel centered around the painters who started the Carmel Art Association, but, to really be known as such, the work of those ladies and gentlemen would have had to influence the painting, drawing and sculpture of other areas.

It seems to me the major effects now are from the outside, and it is like the story of the man who jumped on his horse and rode off in all directions at once. This is not, happily enough, completely true. Our galleries are not showing pieces of plywood with interesting patches, nor works of blood and gore, nor haphazard splashes of paint. We should be very happy that the major concern of our artists is Form and Feeling.

Of the artists who formed the core of the Carmel Art Association it is thought by many that the work of Armin Hansen will become most famous to the rest of the world. The Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art is now showing a large retrospective of his oils, pastels, watercolors, gouaches and etchings.

I remember him well. He was a big man of great energy. He liked to twist his eyebrows so that the hairs came to a point. Armin was hearty but not overbearing.

One sees his "Men of the Sea" immediately on entering the gallery. This large oil is reproduced on the cover of the brochure announcing the show. There is great handling of warm and cold colors. The red of the fisherman's shirt is set off against the blue of the bay. The clouds are really billowing, and massive.

Although his subject matter is always obvious, there is often a strong abstract patterning such as in "Drifting." He also could develop a luminosity such as in "Down Channel," and several other works including a pastel, "Untitled." "Castaways" is a small watercolor that insinuates movement.

One of Armin's large oils, "Thanks Unto Thee Oh Lord" has a great mass of red cod, fishermen coming to give thanks, boats, and curiously enough, several fish which are much too large. This painting shows again how brilliantly he could use hot and cold color. It is the same with "Nino." The tremendous red area is balanced by the cool, sculptured waves. One drawing in charcoal, "Overhauling the Boat," is nostalgic to me as I knew those boatworks and am sad that they have passed.

Hansen must have gone to many rodeos. He has caught it all — the bright shirts of the cowboys, the shaped hats, the sinuous, twisting bodies of jumping broncos, the dust and the light.

"Springtime" is a small oil with a dominance of cool color enlivened by a splash of red. There are also some small works involving fishermen. The bodies form a mass which is very graphic against light tones. The purse seiners and the men who fished in them are gone, but thank God that Armin Hansen was here to catch the drama of the activity. To my eye he was a romantic.

OVER AT SITE 311, 311 Forest Ave. in Pacific Grove, there is a one-man show of work of San Francisco painter, William Gatewood. It is called "Fragments of Olan," and suggests a mythical kingdom, which is, in fact, his studio. He has been experimenting with different media. There are two screens which will fold either way. These are complex pieces. The larger one has two or three levels of overlapping forms. He has used gilt and silver, black, and opalescent metallic color. The actual fragments which he is showing are painted on rag paper mounted on foam core.

When put together they make a single composition, but each piece is interesting in itself. There are four black and whites, each one done with a single stroke of a large horsehair brush dipped in Sumi ink. They have a fresh graphic impact. One seems like a universe spinning. The two drawings of obelisks project a certain mystery. They are touchstones of ancient, magic power.

Gatewood has made two very delicate kites which are picture areas — another departure from traditional shapes.

PACIFIC DESIGN ASSOCIATES has a fine gallery on Carmel Rancho Lane. They are hosting a show by Barry Masteller, an artist well known on the peninsula. He is a pixie, and also a spaceman. This is a showing of work covering a period of 10 to 11 years. I don't known when he painted it but his "Irene on the Horizon," a small oil, is quite droll. She is just a suggestion — no figure visable. I think of it as announcing this show which is very large and complex.

I enjoy Barry's painting as a comic surrealist. I know that he is interested in space-time as is indicated in his Arcanum No.1 through No.6, which is reproduced in the announcement brochure.

A number of watercolor and ink works are shown in one room. "Highway Dreamer" is not as zany as his usual surrealism, but, as a person who has been caught in Los Angeles traffic, I thought the dream very probable. In the same room is "Trio" which concerns a piano and pianist trapped between two locomotives. I think this is the status of art in our time.

"Untitled" pictures a three-masted schooner floating above the floor, while the ocean can be seen through a window. In another of these watercolors Barry has condensed a five-story building so that it can sit on a sofa while lightning pierces a cloud overhead.

His apples are great too. "Apple" is a solitary fruit floating in some strange ether. There is also a whole row of apples and oranges suspended above a desert mountain range. "Safe Passage" is a play on the strange craft of putting boats in bottles. In this piece a full-rigged sailing schooner makes waves on an ocean inside of a fish shape. "Origin" is a gentle satire on stitchery in which needles and thread are a triumph of hyper-realism. I loved his "Corporate Structure." This is a maze within which a number of mice are trapped while a cat (obviously the big banana) watches from outside.

Although I doubt that Barry has lost his impish humor, his latest work like "The Canyon" is heavy going. The show, as a whole, indicates a great range of imagery. He has many ways of "seeing" and a mastery of what he uses such as watercolor, acrylic on canvas and paper, mixed media and construction.

Art association installs officers

Newly elected officers of the Central Coast Art Association are Rosemarie Manke, Carmel, president; Katie Stoker, Monterey, vice president; Blanche Pedley, Pacific Grove, treasurer; Jean Frederickson, secretary and Martha Larson, corresponding secretary, both of Pacific Grove.

MUSIC CORNER

Sensitive performance opens Monarch series

KAREN MUTH, organist at Bethlehem Lutheran in Monterey, was the premiere performer for the Monarch Concert Series at First United Methodist Church in Pacific Grove last Sunday, and she opened it in style.

Muth's program was as interesting as it was unusual. Instead of one or two blockbusters and some cotton candy, she chose to play nine different chorale preludes by three different composers, offering a wide variety of settings.

A Prelude, Fuge and Ciacona by Buxtehude opened the program. An important precursor of J.S. Bach, Buxtehude was organist at the Lubeck Cathedral, where he started a renowned concert series. Sebastian Bach once walked 200 miles to hear him. (He stayed for more than one concert.) when Buxtehude was preparing to retire, Bach and Handel, among other prominent musicians, applied for the prestigious post. However, along with the job went the hand of Buxtehude's daughter. They all turned it down.

Buxtehude's influence on the young Bach was evident in this piece. The Prelude was brilliant and free; the fugue short, much less intricate than would be characteristic of Bach; the chaconne, a variation-type, was often used as the finale at this time.

Buxtehude was followed by a compositional persuasion. The chosen piece, Canon in D major, is certainly Pachelbel's most popular work, if not his best. It is not a very interesting work. Furthermore, it is not a canon, and I have no idea where it first got labeled as one, because Pachelbel certainly knew the difference between a canon and a ground, which is what this is. A ground is also a variation-type, in which the Baroque period abounds. A ground is a repeating bass pattern; clever performers of the time (usually composers) would improvise over them. This particular piece spends a lot of its time around a descending D major scale.

Three chorale preludes from the Orgelbuechlein of Bach followed, each wonderful in its own way, expressive and spiritual settings of the chorale tunes.

For the second half of the program, Muth played three chorale preludes each by the 20th century composers Jan Bender and Hermann Schroeder. Both represent the conservative side of contemporary music — solidly based in the 19th century tradition, highly chromatic, but always tonal. They are all interesting, but I found the Schroeder pieces especially rewarding, ranging from bright and clever to quiet and intense.

The program closed with a Partita on "St. Anne," ("Our God, our help in ages past") by Paul Manz, an effective piece although a bit short on substance.

Karen Muth is an impressive young organist, exhibiting strong technique and solid musicianship. Her registrations were mercifully free of gimmicks, sensitive to the texts in the chorale preludes, supportive of the formal elements of the music. Her program covered a wide range of emotion, each projected clearly. If I had to come up with suggestions, it would be in the direction of more variety in articulation, and more clarity at the level of the smaller phrase.

Unfortunately, the program informed us that Muth is leaving the area next year. We wish her well.

Conductor reflects on multi-faceted job

the Cincinnati Symphony and an artistic overseer of the Exxon/Arts Endowment Conductor program, of which Suttle is a veteran.

"I want to hear new ideas. I want to hear a different approach," Suttle added. "For me the worst thing is if someone reacts neutrally to a performance. You must approach a piece the way you see it. There is one philosophy that states you must play the music exactly as recorded on the page. However there comes a point where the composer puts a dot over a note — which shortens it — but that is relative. How short is short? Or what does 'quickly' mean? This is where decisions must be made."

Suttle said that by next season audiences will detect a shift in focus within the county symphony repertoire.

"We will explore a lot more American music and also what we call contemporary music. We're in the first stages of selecting guest artists. We want Monterey County to be a place all the upcoming solo artists have to come through on the way up. They know we will give them fine accompaniment and enhance their reputation."

The conductor maintains that he and the 70-member orchestra have grown in the past two years.

"Artistically it would be hard to move from Monterey County. The orchestra is of a caliber that I'd have to be pretty choosy where I'd go next. I have a great deal of respect for this ensemble."

Suttle reserves respect for the orchestra, and enthusiasm for music. He said he particularly enjoys trying to pass on this enthusiasm to young listeners.

"The Monterey County Symphony does a very extensive in-school demonstration program. The children witness a full symphony program," he recalled. "This is very interesting because at the last youth concert I asked, 'How many people know a piece of classical music?,' and a few hands went up. Then I asked how many liked classical music, and those few hands went down. Then I told them we would try an experiment and show not only do you know classical music, but you like it. Well, we played the last allegro of the William Tell Overture, and they were all delighted because they recognized that as the theme from The Lone Ranger. They realized this is not something that's foreign. It's something we live with every day, but we're not aware of it."

This conductor, whose days are structured around making, enjoying and promoting music, seems sympathetic to those whose lives are little touched by it. Suttle's goal appears to be to lessen listeners' intimidation. He would like to be instrumental in helping the classics reach more ears — live.

"It's very difficult on first hearing to absorb the myriad of details in a great symphony. It's like listening to a lecture on nuclear physics. There's so much music out there, and an audience is an important part of the performance. You must be willing to go hear it and listen with very active ears.

"If you listen to music, you become one with your history. I was listening to a performance by a quintet, and it struck me that I couldn't remember what happened when it was done, except that I felt very drained. I felt that the musicians and the conductor and myself were all one, and the conductor had spoken to me directly, to my feelings. We really felt we'd touched something that was very much above us. It was common to us all, yet very much above us. To have a person like Beethoven amongst us — he left us a legacy, a heritage which is not only our duty to protect and sustain — it's also our duty to enjoy it."

Carl Jung, A.A. connection studied

A presentation titled "Beyond the Beginnings — Further Dialogues for Discovery" will explore the connections between C.G. Jung's Psychology and Alcoholics Anonymous. It will be held at 2 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 2, at All Saints' Church, Ninth and Dolores, Carmel.

After a brief review of Jung's direct and indirect contacts with Bill Wilson (a co-founder of A.A.) panelists will examine how the famous Twelve Steps suggested by A.A. can be dramatically affected by Jung's ideas. Examples include: how the concept of the "shadow" can help blunt the problems of intellectuality, self-righteousness and defiance and how some understanding of our "psychological type" can make a difference in approaching all 12 steps, but especially 7, 8 and 9.

Open discussion, questions and experiential exercise will follow. Panelists for the event are Joseph Pagano of Monterey, Mary Ross of Pebble Beach, Garrett Stearly of Carmel Valley and Kathleen Sullivan of Pacific Grove.

This is the third of a series of events sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Friends of C.G. Jung, which is composed of people who are finding mutual support while enlarging their knowledge of Dr. Jung's psychology.

One-woman show focuses on local people, places

A ONE-WOMAN show of paintings by Carmel Highlands artist Pamela Benda opens Wednesday, Nov. 5 at the Marjorie Evans Gallery in Sunset Center, Carmel. A reception for the artist is scheduled 5 to 7 p.m.

An award-winning portrait painter, Benda trained at the Art Student's League in New York City.

"Language has its limits. There are many things that can only be said through an image, especially about other people" Benda observed. Her portraits and landscapes hang in more than 300 private collections around the United States and Canada. Her work is currently represented in galleries in New York City and in Albequerque, N.M.

Benda specializes in portraiture. Among her local subjects are artist Emil White, sculptor Harry Dick Ross and the founder of Nepenthe, Bill Fassett.

"I use different techniques and styles in order to achieve specific intentions," Benda noted. Recently she has broken from a traditional impressionistic style to develop a series of paintings which lean toward abstract expressionism while employing the human figure.

Her intentions are wide-ranging, and even embrace political themes.

"It is not always easy to find an audience for my political work," Benda stated, "but politics are just part of my life, any artist's life, and if we value our freedom and civil liberties, politics should be at least a small part of everybody's life."

Last spring she traveled to the American Indian reservations in Arizona and, in addition to painting the Indians, wrote a piece on their plight. She is also a confirmed letter writer, addressing her comments to newspaper readers and politicians.

"Speaking up can create a new climate of opinion," Benda said. "Surveys show that up to five times more people read these letters (to the editor) than read the regular news sections."

Benda accepts some portrait commissions and also teaches a few students at her retreat and studio in Carmel Highlands.

"I'm not looking to create a school of imitators," she stated. "Providing inspiration and helping the students to develop their own style is my approach. Painting people and teaching people to paint have always been my first loves."

Sunset Center is on San Carlos Street near Ninth Avenue in Carmel. The gallery is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and on nights of performances in Sunset Theater. For more information, call 624-3996.

SPIRIT OF CARMEL*, a 52-by-27-inch oil painting by Carmel Highlands artist Pamela Benda, is among her works that will be featured in a one-woman show at the Marjorie Evans Gallery. An opening reception is planned 5 to 7 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 5 at the gallery, located in Sunset Center, San Carlos Street at Ninth Avenue, Carmel.
